Exemplifying the true Mustang spirit, the varsity football team, in the appropriate blue and gray, show who's #1.

Renewed Spirit

On September 3, 2,733 students crowded the halls, ready to forge into the new school year. Most of the excited chatter among students focused on the loss of the freshman class. For the first time in its five year history, the doors opened to a student body comprised of only sophomores, juniors and seniors. A new attitude burst forth from the Mustangs as they anticipated obvious changes.

A renewed spirit for the blue and gray haunted the halls, overcoming students and resulting in enthusiastic classes and a school unified under the mighty Mustang. This feeling was apparent at the wildly eager pep assemblies. Outrageous and imaginative activities which included competitive class rivalries, unusual dress-up days, and support for the top-notch sports program tipped off the opening of school. Thus, new attitudes and spirit broke forth with unparalleled fervor, preparing the foundation for future traditions.

Capturing the freedom of style, senior Michelle Erard cools off after attending a DECA convention at Mesa's Centennial Hall.

Renewed Freedom

Being a three-year school brought a new sense of style and freedom. While stating their identity and individual tastes, students together developed a mature attitude and discovered growing freedom brought on added responsibilities.

Fewer students remained on campus for lunch, taking advantage of open lunch privileges. The accessibility to cars made the going easy. Students could select from various cuisines as establishments literally popped up overnight. Since an increased number of students were eligible to drive, the parking lot often overflowed with various vehicles.

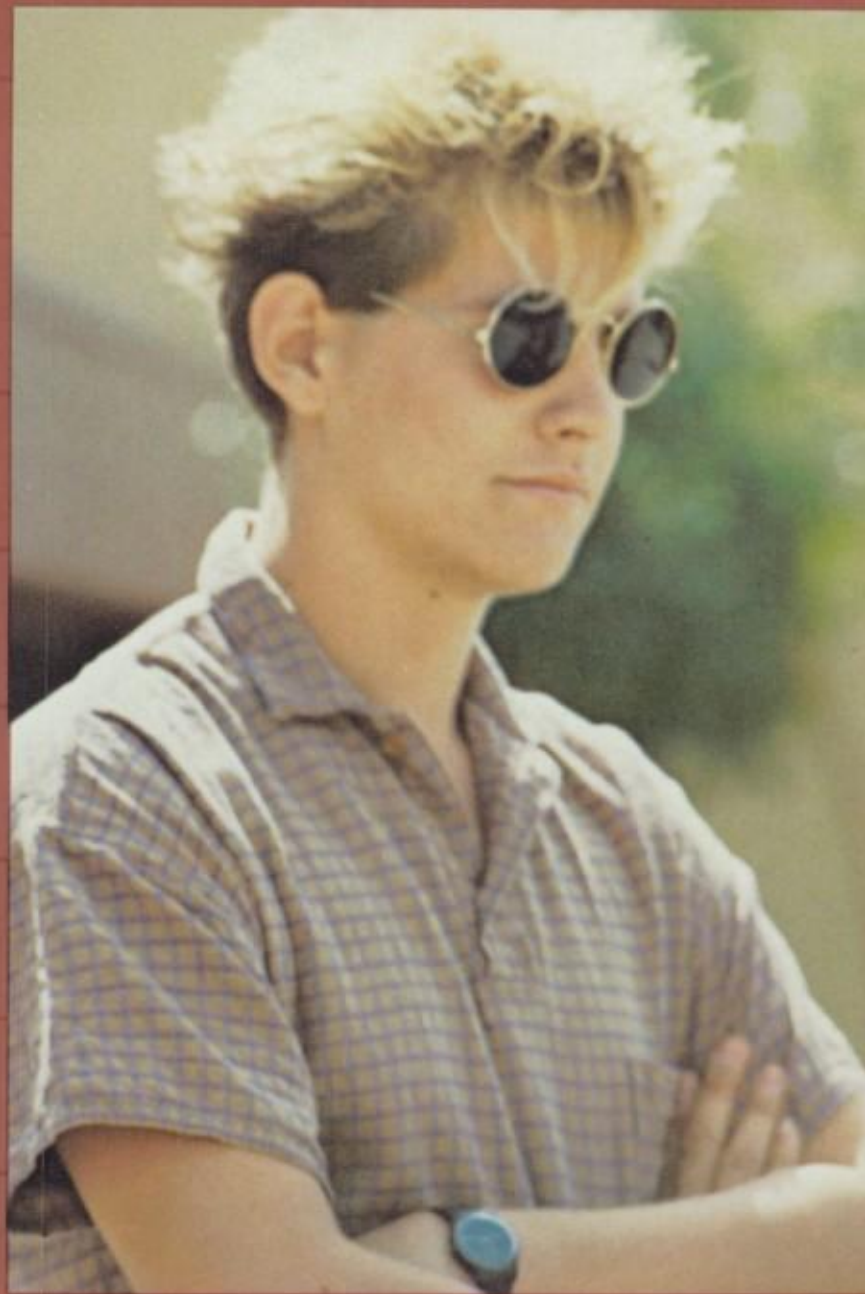

Also, was the freedom to dress in unique styles, a statement of identity as well as creativity. Feeling emancipated due to the decrease in numbers, students enthusiastically experimented with new angles in capturing the challenges of high school.

Trying A New Angle

9th Student Life

Student life was filled with many interesting facets that showcased the opinions and pleasures of the student body. While some were school-related, the majority reflected unusual, exciting off-campus activities.

Weekends were made for . . . Everyone had his own definition of what his ideal weekend was. Students planned their own events to relieve the stressful tension of the school week.

Whether working to earn spending money, or saving for an investment, many students (continued on p. 9)

Anxious to enjoy a cool ride to lunch, Traci Kennedy watches Anne Patterson help Rachelle Brugada lower her car top.

After spending an entire pep assembly on ice blocks, the varsity football players reveal their undrenched spirits. Their enthusiasm paid off with a victory against season-opener Maryvale.

Student Life

slaved away at various local stores after school. Money vanished out of the palms of compulsive spenders, while others desperately tried to conserve, their heads filled with thoughts of buying their own car.

Money earned from jobs was used to keep students caught up in the fashion world. They shopped for the "in" clothing mostly at Fiesta Mall. In addition, money was needed to keep that all-important car on its four wheels. Anything left over was used for either buying lunch at the cafeteria, or making a pilgrimage to a more expensive fast food restaurant.

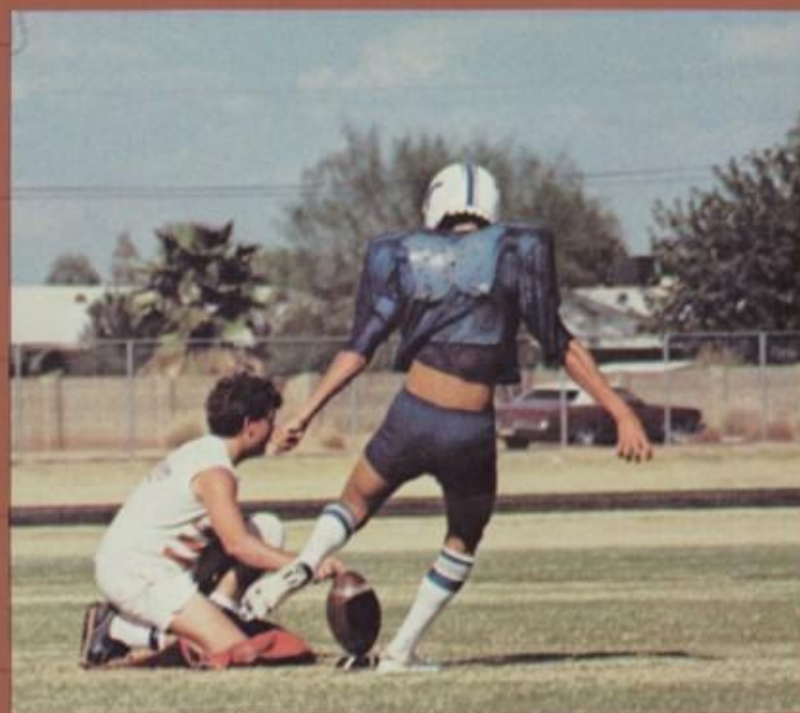

During the school day and on weekends, students hung around with their friends, or in a few cases, their twins. In addition, dating served as a special form of interaction between students.

Ever present in a student's life was the aching drudgery of early mornings. On most days, it was not so easy to rise and shine with the alarm clock.

No matter what aspect of a student's life was involved, the Mustangs always showed their pride and excitement by trying new angles.

A round the World in Ninety Days

Summer — the word itself conjures up thoughts of vacations, leisure time, and new experiences. Students explored new angles this summer by doing traditional summer activities in not so traditional ways.

Summer camps, as American as apple pie, were one example. Modern campers went to the beaches of Santa Cruz, California or to the mountains of Flagstaff rather than "Camp Hiawatha". Usual camp activities like canoeing and crafts were replaced by workshops that taught leadership, journalism, athletics, and peer relationship skills.

Like many students, seniors Lisa Covey and Brandi Martinez attended summer school, only their classes were at Georgetown University in Washington D.C. There they took a three week government class that introduced them to such prestigious national officials as Vice President George Bush and Secretary of State George Schultz.

The customary summer vacation received a new twist for seven students and Mr. Merlene when they took a four week tour throughout Europe visiting six countries and taking in such sights as the Eiffel Tower; the Swiss Alps, and the Roman Coliseum. Some students had working vacations at summer camps and resorts, where they lived away from home.

These unique experiences proved that students weren't afraid to try a different angle in pursuit of new experiences.

Halfway around the world in Tokyo, Japan, Heather Oddenetto and friend Susan Pool take a break from a modeling job to revitalize themselves with a tour of local sights.

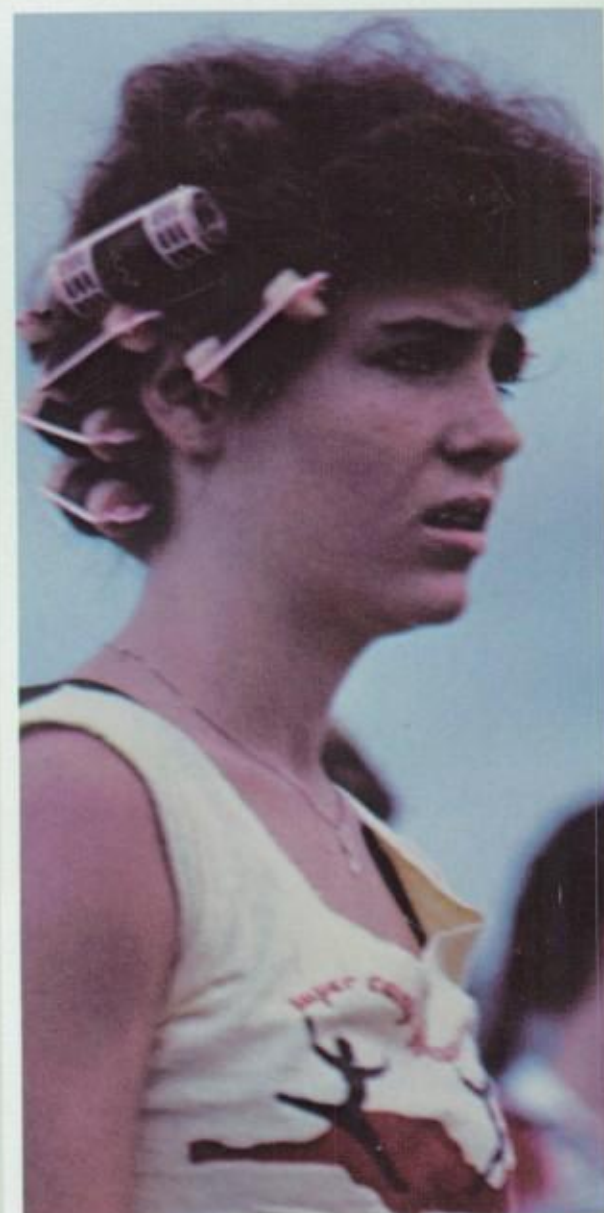

Smiling at her reflection, senior Kathryn Wilson blow dries her hair as she prepares for school.

Catching up on his beauty rest, senior Nick Thomas sleeps contentedly, knowing that the force is with him.

A member of the pom-line, senior Teryl Smith wears a look of fatigue during an early-morning practice.

Rising Faces

Buzzzzzz! The alarm went off. It was 6:00 a.m. as the students hopelessly tried to get back into the routine of the day, taking 15 to 45 minutes to get out of bed. A lazy stroll to the bathroom, where a shower and other preparations for the day took place, followed. Breakfast was usually quick and only temporarily satisfying. After a final glance in the mirror, the race to arrive in first-hour class on time began. Once there, the half-awake, glazed-eyed student stole periodic catnaps throughout the hour. "I'm usually not awake in first hour," said senior Steve Chang.

In contrast, there were a few morning people who awoke immediately after the alarm went off, and had time to complete unfinished homework before their first-hour classes. "I enjoy getting up early in order to have time to finish uncompleted homework because my mind feels refreshed and I'm able to think better," said senior, Tina Nelson.

Finally, were the students who were forced to, or at least pretended to be morning people. They were the band members, pom line, athletes, newspaper carriers, and early morning fitness buffs who had to function long before the 8:00 a.m. bell sounded. Many of these people entered their first-hour classes with an alive, fresh, yet temporary glow on their faces. Others, like Roger Tang, managed to make it through lunch. "... in the morning, I am more alert, energetic and hyper. After lunch, I begin to fall asleep in the later classes."

Fortunately, the afternoon naps rejuvenated most of them and prepared them for adventurous afternoons and exciting evenings.

Rushing for the Weekends

T.G.I.F.! On a typical Friday afternoon, sighs of relief echoed through the halls as locker doors slammed and students raced out of the building seeking freedom.

The five day countdown began every Monday morning. Junior Jeremy Grace explained, "I looked forward to the weekend because it was a time when there was no pressure from school, and I could do anything I felt like."

Friday nights were special. Students postponed their homework while thoughts drifted to more important things like, "What am I going to wear tonight?" Preparations for the night out were taken seriously because first impressions needed to be good. To make sure they were lasting, guys bathed in Polo, and girls applied an extra spritz of hairspray — just in case.

Weekends were also a time to do fun and crazy things not usually done during the school week. (continued on page 16.)

With cooperation and balance, Debbie Andre and Cherish Scalf paddle their way back to shore.

Rushing...

The favorites included: cruising, midnight movies, and dating. "My ideal weekend would be to have gone out with a totally gorgeous guy who brings me roses," Junior Pam Peplow noted. When students became tired of the usual activities, they stayed home with friends and enjoyed a big bowl of popcorn and a few good movies on a VCR. Senior Lisa Covey described her weekends, "We would go to the grocery store late at night, and fill up a cart with groceries, then trade, and see who could put the other's groceries back the fastest."

Saturdays were a time for sleeping late — but not too late. Picnicking, golfing, football games, or just being with family and friends filled the day. A good place to spend time and money was Fiesta Mall.

Regular weekends were great, but the three day, holiday weekends were even better. Many students enjoyed snow skiing during the winter. Skimming over the water on skis at Canyon or Saguaro Lakes, or tubing down the Salt River made students forget about going back to school. Some went out of town to visit relatives or friends. For those who weren't able to go out of town, teen night clubs were a must. Goldrush and Devilhouse were available Sunday nights, where students could dance the night away.

Although weekends always seemed too short, they gave students something to look forward to. It has been said that people live for the weekends, and the Mustangs proved it.

Drudgery for Currency

"I am not lending you any more money, go out and get a job!" This one phrase sent thousands of teens out on the prowl for work.

However, not only parents influenced teens to enter the working world. The need for money, social occasions, and material items also prompted them. It came down to either getting a job or spending the weekends at home in front of the T.V. A fate that was seen as worse than death.

Once a job was incorporated into the schedule, there was rarely time for going out. Between working twelve to forty hours a week, homework and sleep, time seemed to disappear.

Working was not entirely boring. Andrea Bones found her job in a dentist's office gave her added responsibility.

Added fringe benefits included work related parties and the opportunity to join work sponsored teams.

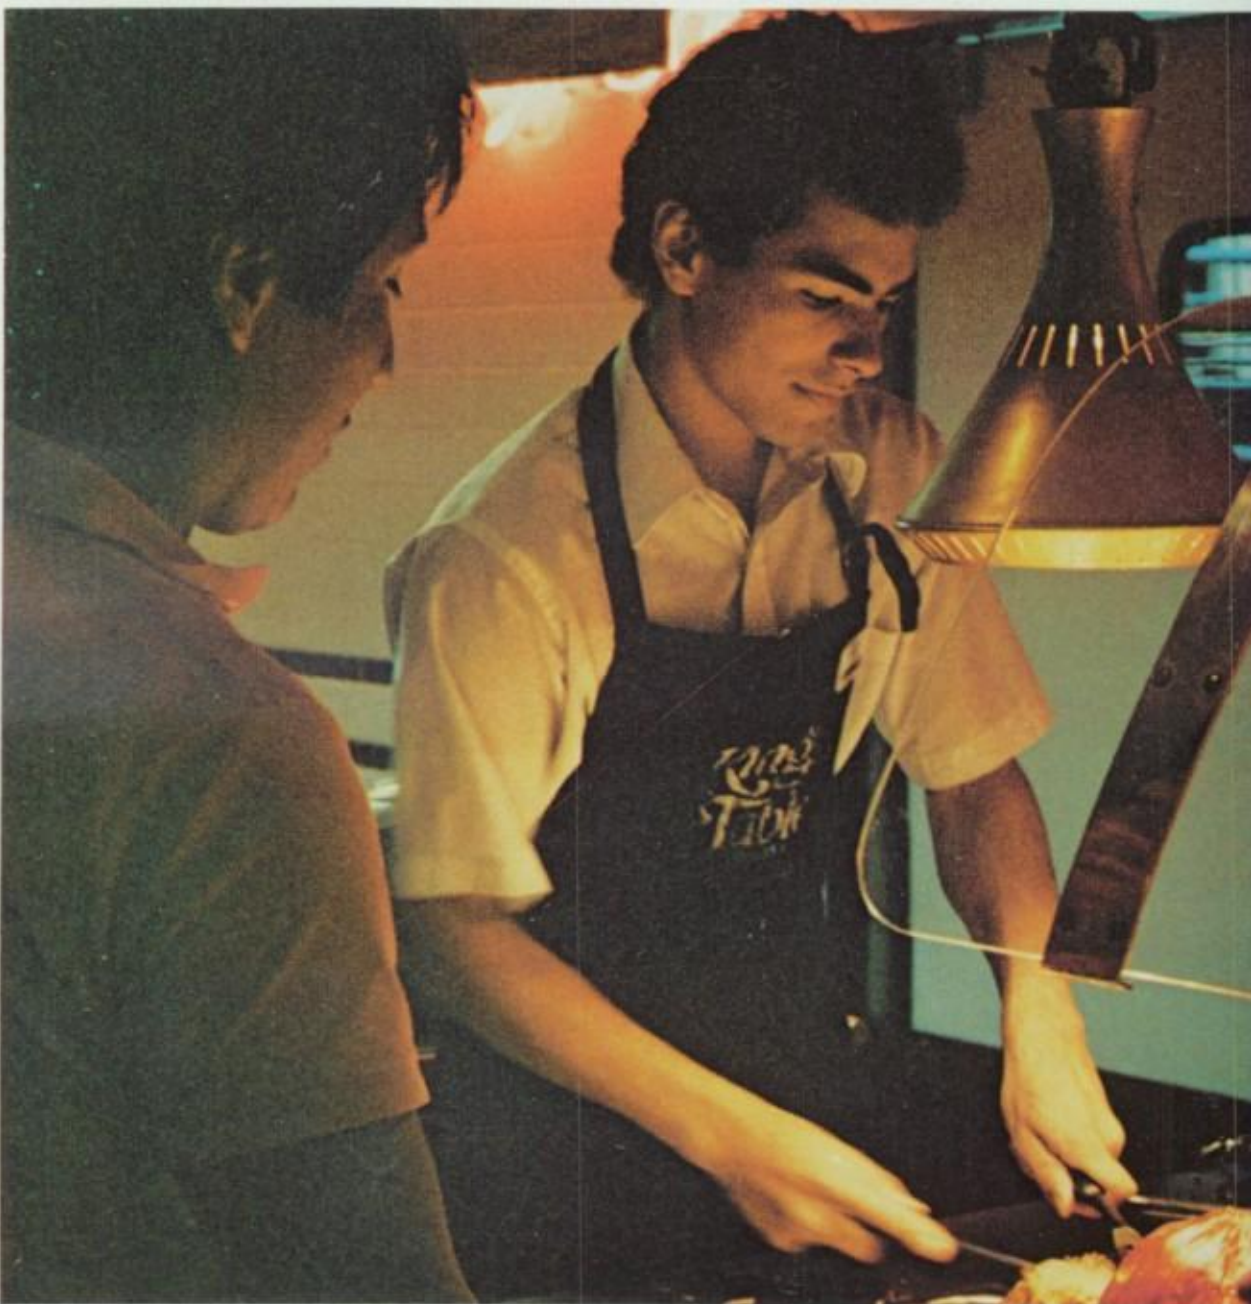

Although working could have been considered drudgery for currency, the benefits of clothes, cars, and occasional fun made it worth the effort.

The Dating Games

Trying new angles at dating came naturally to the Mustangs. Although some couples found it fun to date different people, some preferred a steady relationship all year long. While some Mustangs chose to date people outside of school, others chose to stick with those on campus.

Along with new people, there were many new and different angles for dating, and choosing the right one was the most exciting part! For Lori Plotkowski, a senior, dating someone outside of school was a challenge — "Dating people from other schools gave me the chance to be with someone who wasn't involved in the same routine as I, and gave both of us breathing space to be ourselves at school."

Not only were there these choices, but many Mustangs had other decisions to make. Choosing where to go on a Friday or Saturday night was a common dating dilemma. Miniature golf was becoming more popular due to the new Golf Land which was built close to home, and, of course, the movies were still a common attraction.

As the year rolled by, guys and girls kept dating a top priority. Whether sitting at home enjoying a movie, or swinging a golf club, the Mustangs discovered there were many new angles to dating.

Whoosh, putt-putt Unzoom!

SCREECH! Fortunately, the sound of squealing tires and brakes coming to a halt was not often heard amid the hub-bub of those coming to school.

Students abounded on campus on skateboards, scooters, feet, bikes, cars, and buses. However, most preferred a ride with their parents over the bus where Dawn Sapanaro said, "You'd get smushed because there were nearly four people to a seat."

Karen Gajewsky found that her scooter never made the dreary ride to school boring and her friends even made excuses so she could give them a ride. Doug Denlinger was another constantly plagued with requests for rides as he owned his own '85 pick-up. A common excuse was, "You're the only person I know who drives!"

The bottom line was that students got to school any way they could. However, Sara Volpp dreamingly said, "I wouldn't mind driving a Mercedes 450 SL convertible."

The Students' Sin

It's been around since the first Egyptian students crowded into the halls of Pyramid High. Teachers didn't like it, and administrators lectured about the consequences of committing the cardinal sin of education — cheating.

There were two types of cheating — spontaneous and pre-meditated. Examples of spontaneous cheating included "double-checking" answers and making a few corrections.

Premeditated cheating was the new trend in the field, and had achieved a cult following. Disciples of premeditated cheating treated it as a religion, practicing it zealously and praying before every attempt.

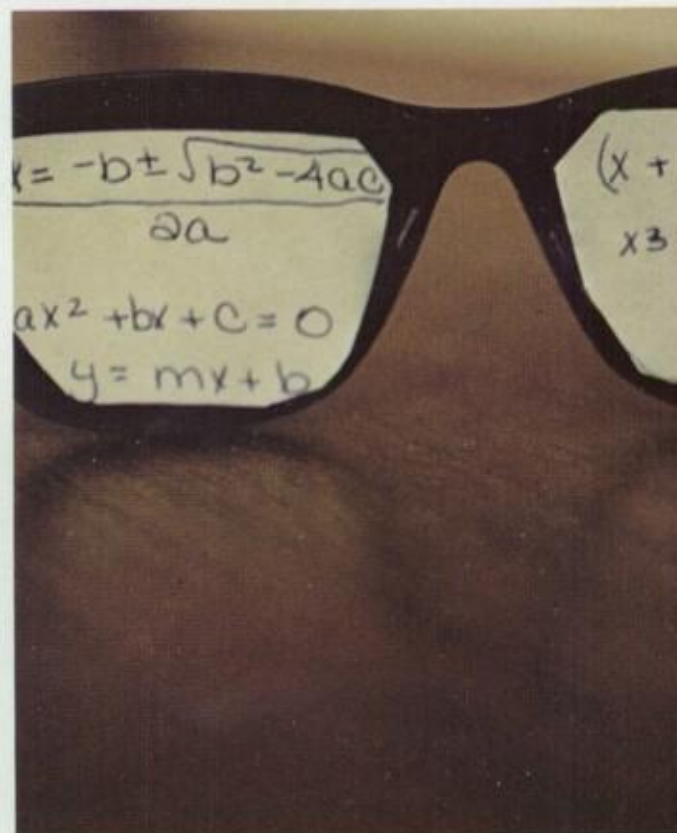

"Everybody cheated at one time or another, but few admitted it," said a student and occasional cheater who wished to remain anonymous. "A cheat sheet came in really handy when I had a math test the next day and 'Dynasty' was on."

While cheating of any variation was far from the right thing to do, students kept trying new angles to perfect it.

Choices of a New Generation

Pure shock! That was the reaction to the new outrageous fads. Call them wild, even wacky, but the new styles were definitely high energy and imaginative.

Prints were mixed with other patterns, while accessories created an individual style.

Not only was fashion just a woman's world, but also a man's. Some guys crossed the gender barrier by applying make-up, tinting hair, and wearing earrings. In addition, unisex clothing was commonplace.

The inspiration for these trends came from a revival of previous fads. The long tight skirts, pearls, brooches, antiquated jewelry and paisley prints were salvaged from years past.

As illustrated in the above photos, campus fashion represented an array of styles.

1. Lifting John Bono into the air, mods Michelle Erard, Misha Betts, Laura Toothman and Michelle Chapman show their playful attitudes.

2. GO all over, Terry Buske and Oscar Escobedo exhibit the look which involves snazzy slacks and classic dress shirts.

3. Casual juniors Nancy Masters and Irene Nerling exemplified the laid back style. Guess and Forenza were popular, usually accompanied by shirts buttoned at the collar.

4. A variety of personal originality leaps off the page as representatives of the various fashion groups gather to show the look of the 80's.

5. Capturing the sporty trend was the wearing of Swatches. The designers definitely showed their creativity here by giving us a wide selection to choose from.

6. Wild and extraordinary, Mary Slavin and Eric Vidmar are dressed in black, a popular color this year.

There was no doubt about it. The choices of the new generation attracted everyone's attention.

Double Takes

Imagine looking at your brother or sister and seeing an exact replica of yourself. Some people may enjoy this experience, some prefer to be their own unique selves, while others don't even have to imagine it because they are twins. How exactly do twins get along? Michelle and Melissa Prins explained that they share a special relationship they never want to lose. "We spend a lot of time together. We are best friends."

Playing a practical joke such as switching classes or outsmarting parents had at least crossed the mind of every twin even if a plan was not put into action. Kevin Felix explained how he and his brother Joel used being twins to their advantage, "Whenever we go to the movies, we only pay for one ticket and the other slips in while no one is looking. It saves money."

Throughout their lives, twins encounter strange situations. Cathy and Casey Normoyle describe one, "A band asked us to be the lead singers of their group so that they could name it 'Double Vision'."

Relax Go 90's It

"Lunch was a time for us seniors to get away from underclassmen," commented Jim Gray. Taun Schultz added, "It's also a nice break from school."

But getting a break from underclassmen was not the only purpose for lunch. Julie Rice explained, "It broke up the monotony of my day and gave me a chance to relax with my friends."

Most people enjoyed the freedom of "open lunch" by traveling to different restaurants every day. Among the favorites were Burger King, Dairy Queen and McDonald's. These restaurants were favored for different reasons. Mike Esposito even admitted going to Burger King just to watch the trains.

Staying on campus was also an option for lunch. Sheila Crowe, cafeteria manager, succeeded in improving lunches this year by adding Coke, baked potatoes, and a new brand of pizza. These changes gave the students what they wanted making the cafeteria the best fast food place for the money.

For those jocks with a busy schedule, Dots became a good hamburger substitute.

Aren't you hungry? If so, come on over, you deserve a break today.

Like many other students, Keli Buessing, Eric Van Hook, and Mary Sylvester enjoy their lunch in the company of friends.

Avoiding the rush at the numerous local fast food places, Lisa Collins orders lunch from the campus snack wagon.

Spirited junior Scott Brocksmith cannot help but show the bitter agony of falling victim to a "Senior Prank" by biting into a caramel onion during Westwood Weak.

During the "Ugly Legs" contest, Coach Mike Clark, Coach Russ Weiner, and varsity football players, Steve Holmes, and Eric Gehrig, spiritedly donate their sexy legs.

Seniors Carrie Osborne and Becky Priest were just a few of the many Mustangs that got caught up in the spirit by decorating their faces during Westwood Weak.

Catch the Excitement!

Who would have ever thought of a varsity football player dressed up in girls' clothes, with girls' make-up on, sitting on a block of ice through a whole assembly, only to find out who's really Mr. Cool??? Well, our own varsity football players found out along with the crowd!

The Mustangs found it easy to get caught up in the Mustang spirit at pep rallies given throughout the year. Cheerleaders, pommies, band members, and student council leaders were always there promoting spirit by infecting the crowd with their own enthusiasm. Spirit Commissioner Lynne Dosssey, who was constantly on the go creating spirit, stated, "I love being Spirit Commissioner, especially when everyone dresses up, participates, and shows their spirit. It gives me a feeling of accomplishment."

Homecoming '85

IN TRIBUTE TO COACH DICK PALLAS

At the head of the pack, Seniors Robert Marquardt, Scott Rados, and Robert Thomas pave the way for the rowdy and excited football players as they tear down the fifty foot banner held by screaming Mustang fans.

"Forever"

October 12, 1985 —

Last night was the homecoming game. We played Marcos de Niza and demolished them 40 to 27. During halftime, the homecoming queen candidates, Susie Gerace, Valerie Rubio, and Kellie Thurston, were escorted down the field by Rick James, Mike Nache, and Vince Otstot. The sky lit up with "Homecoming '85" in a fireworks display as Vince and Valerie were announced Homecoming Royalty 1985. Valerie told me later that "it felt so good to be waving to all of the people in the stands!"

Dress up days preceeded the homecoming game. Wednesday, the juniors proved themselves the most ready for college on Collegiate Day. Thursday, the sophomores reminded us that they were all still kids at heart by bringing the most Disneyland souvenirs on Disney Day. Finally, the seniors came through by wearing more blue and silver than any other class on Friday.

Tonight, my date took me to the new Hilton for dinner where we saw many of our friends. Student Council went all out to decorate the Student Center. They even rolled out the red carpet! Silver balloons and red and black streamers were everywhere. Valerie and Vince danced the spotlight dance to "Forever", the theme song. After my date took me home I couldn't stop thinking about the best homecoming yet.

Of all Harvests Performances

Lights! Camera! Action! With this direction, Autumn performances premiered colorfully.

Singing harmoniously, Mr. Evans's chorus groups performed on October 15. Unique this year, Showstoppers was featured with jazzy dance and singing routines. The also new Chorale choir sang an anthem from the back of the auditorium. Mr. Evans commented, "All choirs performed very well. I was pleased with the way they handled themselves on stage."

The Dobson symphonic band accompanied the ASU symphonic band on November 19. Preparing weeks in advance, they fulfilled Mr. Mayne's expectations of, "Play your own part; contribute to the band, and maturity." Senior Deb André commented, "To be able to perform and practice with members of the ASU Band gave me a chance to experience a higher and more mature level of performing."

Suite 719 at the Plaza Hotel was occupied by performers in the play directed by Mr. Olson. Running from November 14 to 16, the play-in-the-round had the audience rolling in the aisles with laugh-

Get Into A Spirit

There were laughs and smiles galore on Halloween as nervy people dared to dress up as whoever or whatever they wanted. Some even took on different identities that were in complete contrast to their usual personalities.

At lunch you may have thought you were sitting by a flapper from the twenties, but it was probably just sophomore, Amy Stoll. "The best part about Halloween is you get to act crazy with your friends," she exclaimed.

The spirit didn't cease on Thursday as everyone was getting psyched for the tough game against Chandler. The pommies and cheerleaders wore crazy costumes and boosted the crowds enthusiasm.

People not only enjoyed Halloween because it provided excitement, but also because they had the rare opportunity to pose as traditional favorites like ghosts and clowns; others took on the look of their aspired occupations;

while still others aped their favorite celebrities like the "maahvelous" Fernando Lamas.

Again, Halloween proved to be a highlight in an otherwise routine school day.

A "Bright" Christmas

A tall, regal evergreen tree adorned in festive colors, towered above the room. Outside, children, bundled in warm clothing, played in endless fields of cold, white snow. Long icicles hung off the roof.

A saguaro cactus stood in the front yard all aglow in bright, colorful Christmas lights. Kids in shorts and t-shirts tossed a football around, comfortable in 70° weather.

These two scenes described Christmas, yet only the second fits Arizona. After moving from the harsh, cold Midwest and East to the sunny state of Arizona, many missed the old traditions of sleigh rides, snowball fights, and sub-zero temperatures.

Christmas week was celebrated in various ways. The week before vacation, Student Council sponsored various dress-up days. Students decked out in Santa hats and their best red and green attire.

In addition, five tons of man-made snow was trucked in and dumped on the senior lawn. During lunch, students were able to reacquaint themselves with the cold, wet, white stuff.

Many school clubs, such as Drama, Yearbook, and Newspaper, celebrated with the "Secret Santa" custom. Students secretly selected another club member and purchased gifts for them.

While many have trouble getting used to Christmas in Arizona, the Christmas of '85 was just a bit different. For the first time in decades, measurable snow was recorded, surprising and pleasing many students, lonely for a good snowfall.

Volcanic Disaster

Long a dormant crater, the volcano Nevado del Ruiz became tragically active on the night of November twentieth. First a reddish flare brightened the sky, followed by an avalanche of ash and mud which covered the town of Armero, Colombia. Although rescue efforts were made, as many as 20,000 people were killed, and another 150,000 were left homeless.

Saved from the mud along with two other children, Sandra was just one of the children orphaned after the eruption.

Individually, Michael J. Fox became one of the biggest box office names through his summer-time hit movie Back to the Future.

Titanic

The luxury liner Titanic was found beneath 12,000 feet of water, 400 miles off the coast of Newfoundland, 73 years after it sunk. The ship will not be raised out of respect for the dead and because the great depth has preserved it.

Tragedy Remembered

The fortieth anniversary of the ending of World War II was commemorated by President Ronald Reagan by a ten-day European tour. His visit was completed after a VE-Day address to the European Parliament.

Controversy arose during his trip because of his planned visit to the military cemetery at Bitburg, West Germany, where forty-four Nazi S.S. members are buried. Many people were afraid that President Reagan's visit to the cemetery showed that he had forgotten the horrors of the war. Despite protests, President Reagan made an eight minute visit to the cemetery.

Apartheid

Almost 500 people, mostly blacks, were killed protesting South Africa's policy of apartheid. Bishop Desmond Tutu led a non-violent struggle against this rigidly enforced policy of racial segregation. Even in the United States demonstrations at colleges were held protesting apartheid.

Comet Comes Back

Approximately every 76 years Halley's Comet passes Earth during its elliptical orbit around the sun, and 1986 marked another visit. At a distance of thirty-nine million miles, the comet was at its closest point to Earth on April 11. Halley's Comet is famous for its brightness and predictability which is the reason for its being named after Edmund Halley. The English astronomer correctly predicted that the comet seen in 1682 would return in 1758.

Royal Visitors

Prince Charles and Princess Diana of Wales arrived in Washington on November 9th marking Princess Diana's first trip to America. During their visit, they toured the Capitol, the National Gallery's exhibition, and met with young leaders of America.

Before this trip, the couple visited Australia where they danced at a charity ball in Melbourne.

Headlines 1985-1986

Happy Returns

It was the year of comebacks on the television screen. Bill Cosby returned with The Bill Cosby Show that hit number one in January. The Twilight Zone reappeared along with Alfred Hitchcock Presents. With the help of computers, scenes with Alfred Hitchcock from the old series were put in color for the new show.

Bridging Gaps

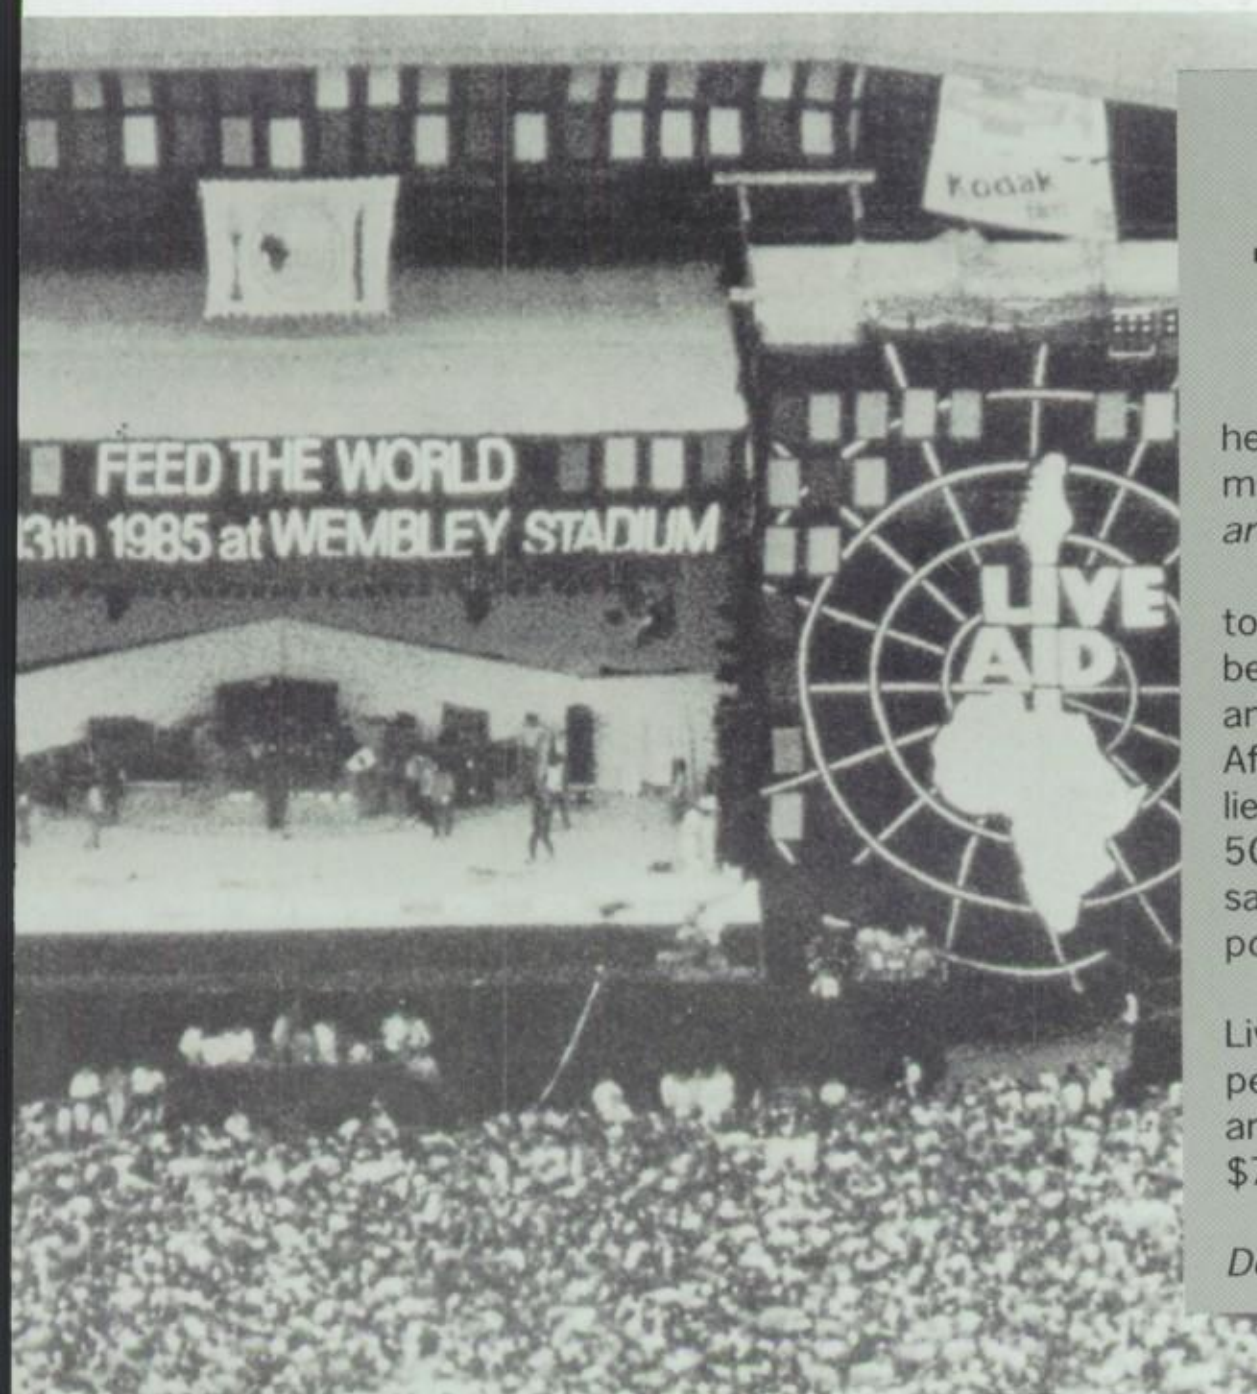

In November, President Reagan and Soviet Leader Mikhail Gorbachev met in Geneva, Switzerland for the first summit between the two nations since 1979. Topics discussed were strategic weapons, space weapons, nuclear non-proliferation, regional conflicts, bilateral issues, and human rights. More importantly, conversation began, leading to further cultural exchanges between the two nations.

Tragedy in Mexico

An earthquake struck the densely populated Mexico City causing havoc and destruction. Thousands of people were killed in the initial shock that struck at 7:18 a.m. and many others in the aftershocks that followed. Relief poured in from across the globe including the International Red Cross which sent in search and rescue specialists from Geneva.

Rescue efforts continued for several days in hopes of reaching survivors buried beneath the rubble. Miraculously, rescuers unearthed several newborn infants from a fallen city hospital.

We Are The World

"There comes a time when we heed a certain call, when the world must come together as one." — We are the World

All over the world celebrities came together to sing for causes that they believed in. It began with Band-Aid and was soon followed with USA for Africa's album We are the World. Willie Nelson organized Farm Aid where 50 country and rock performers sang for 78,000 fans to raise support for American farmers.

The event that made history was Live Aid in July. A 16-hour concert performed simultaneously in London and Philadelphia, Live Aid raised over $70.5 million.

Coke is it . . . and it

First it was the real thing, then it was the new thing, now the old thing is back only under a new name, Coca-Cola Classic. For the first time since its introduction, the Coca-Cola Company changed the formula of its famous soft drink. Thousands of angry Coke fans protested the change and the company responded by bringing back the old favorite.

AIDS

AIDS, just the word raises eyebrows and fears. Although the disease isn't new, Rock Hudson's death brought it into the media limelight. Once thought to afflict only homosexuals, it is now rampant among drug users due to the use of community syringes.

Hijacking

Last June, TWA flight 847 fell victim to an in-air hijacking. While leaving Athens, two Lebanese men held 153 passengers on board as hostage. Flight attendant Uli Derickson became the first woman to receive the U.S. Legion of Valor's Silver Cross for her bravery during this ordeal.

Trying A New Angle

in Academics

Being selected a first place winner in the Arizona Department of Education Secondary School Recognition Program was a reflection on the quality of education provided for over 2,700 students.

Aiding in this effort was new superintendent of the Mesa Public School District Dr. James Zaharis. The school board and superintendency, as well as our own administration, provided the resources and encouragement necessary for excellence in education.

New angles in the academic areas included the new Math Quad, communication electives in English, increased use of visual aides in foreign language, extra curricular instruction in science and active involvement in the social studies area. All provided not only basic knowledge, but also practical application of skills important to everyday life.

Vocational classes used a hands on approach to learning. Agriculture, home economics, auto mechanics and music and the fine arts provided learning experiences outside of the classroom.

Filled portable classrooms and extended-day scheduling were a thing of the past as Dobson finally became a true three-year school.

Moving Ahead

Principals Tackle New Problems

“Even if you’re doing well, don’t get complacent, always try to do better,” said Principal Walsh of the administration’s philosophy going into the year. On the first day of school, students were greeted by the most obvious fruits of the administrators’ labor — the security cages for the lockers, and the campaign against tardiness with a strict, new policy. Principal Walsh was aided in these endeavors by three fellow administrators.

In addition, Mrs. Caldwell handled the registration process and the senior class with ease; Mr. Storment ably took care of the junior class and student activities; while Mr. Rowden enthusiastically tackled the sophomore class and athletics.

Mr. Walsh proudly concluded, “We have good kids and staff . . . let’s face it, this is a great school!”

Along with his numerous responsibilities, Mr. Storment still finds time to aid students like sophomore Phillip Kajca.

Be A Buddy

Counselors Adopt New System

"Knowing just one person makes all the difference in the world during that first week," commented new student John Bono. "The Buddy System is a really great idea!" On orientation day, new students approached a crowd of veterans and searched for signs with their names. The buddies were given a chance to get acquainted. This program, developed by the counseling department, gave new students an alternative to the lonely first day of school.

Besides the Buddy System, counselors also coordinated Op Shop, a program that allows students to visit booths and obtain information on colleges, tech schools, and job opportunities.

As important as these innovative programs, was the willingness of counselors to help students with their individual concerns.

It was 12 a.m. — otherwise known as the twilight zone. Peeking around the stucco wall came the whir of a . . . vacuum cleaner! Closely behind, Commander Glen Anderson led his janitorial troops, armed with ajax, to battle school grime.

In the office, secretaries attacked endless paperwork and tracked AWOL students. The bookstore staffers kept pupils equipped for classes. Those with homework fever received the nurse's care. Security guards, maintaining law and order, patrolled the campus.

Meeting Center

Library: More Than Just Books

Did you ever find yourself researching information for an English composition? Did you read that gripping novel that you just couldn't put down, or did you get together with a group of friends and talk about exciting events? If so, this probably all took place in the media center.

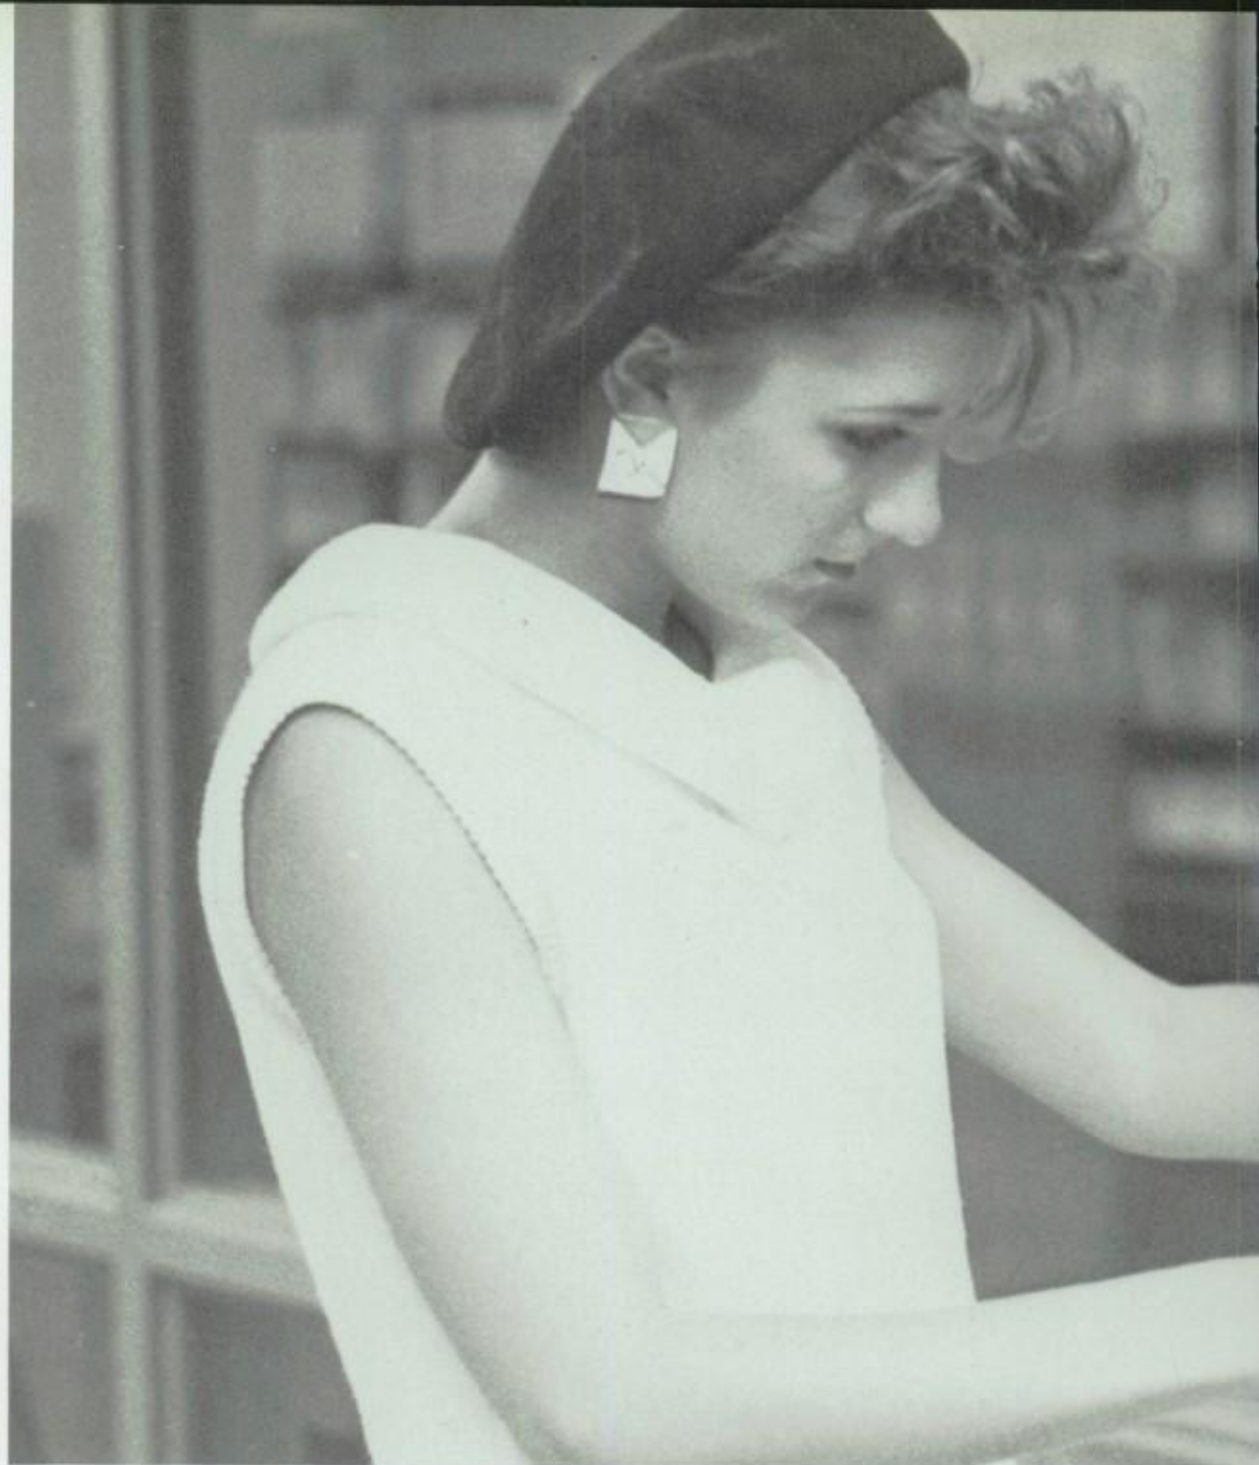

Located in the heart of the school, the media center was where most students congregated. Librarians, Mrs. Houston and Mr. Conn, provided assistance with materials which included: filmstrips, videos, magazines, and reference books.

Mythology, science, and history benefited from extra funding this year. Because of this, several new titles were added to the stacks.

The organization and friendly assistance of the staff made the library a social and academic center.

Holy Moley

Science Concocts New System

Do you know what a mole is? If you answered a small furry animal you obviously haven't spent enough time in the science department. To learn the answer to this and other such questions, the science department put into use a new teaching style called the Learning Cycle Strategy.

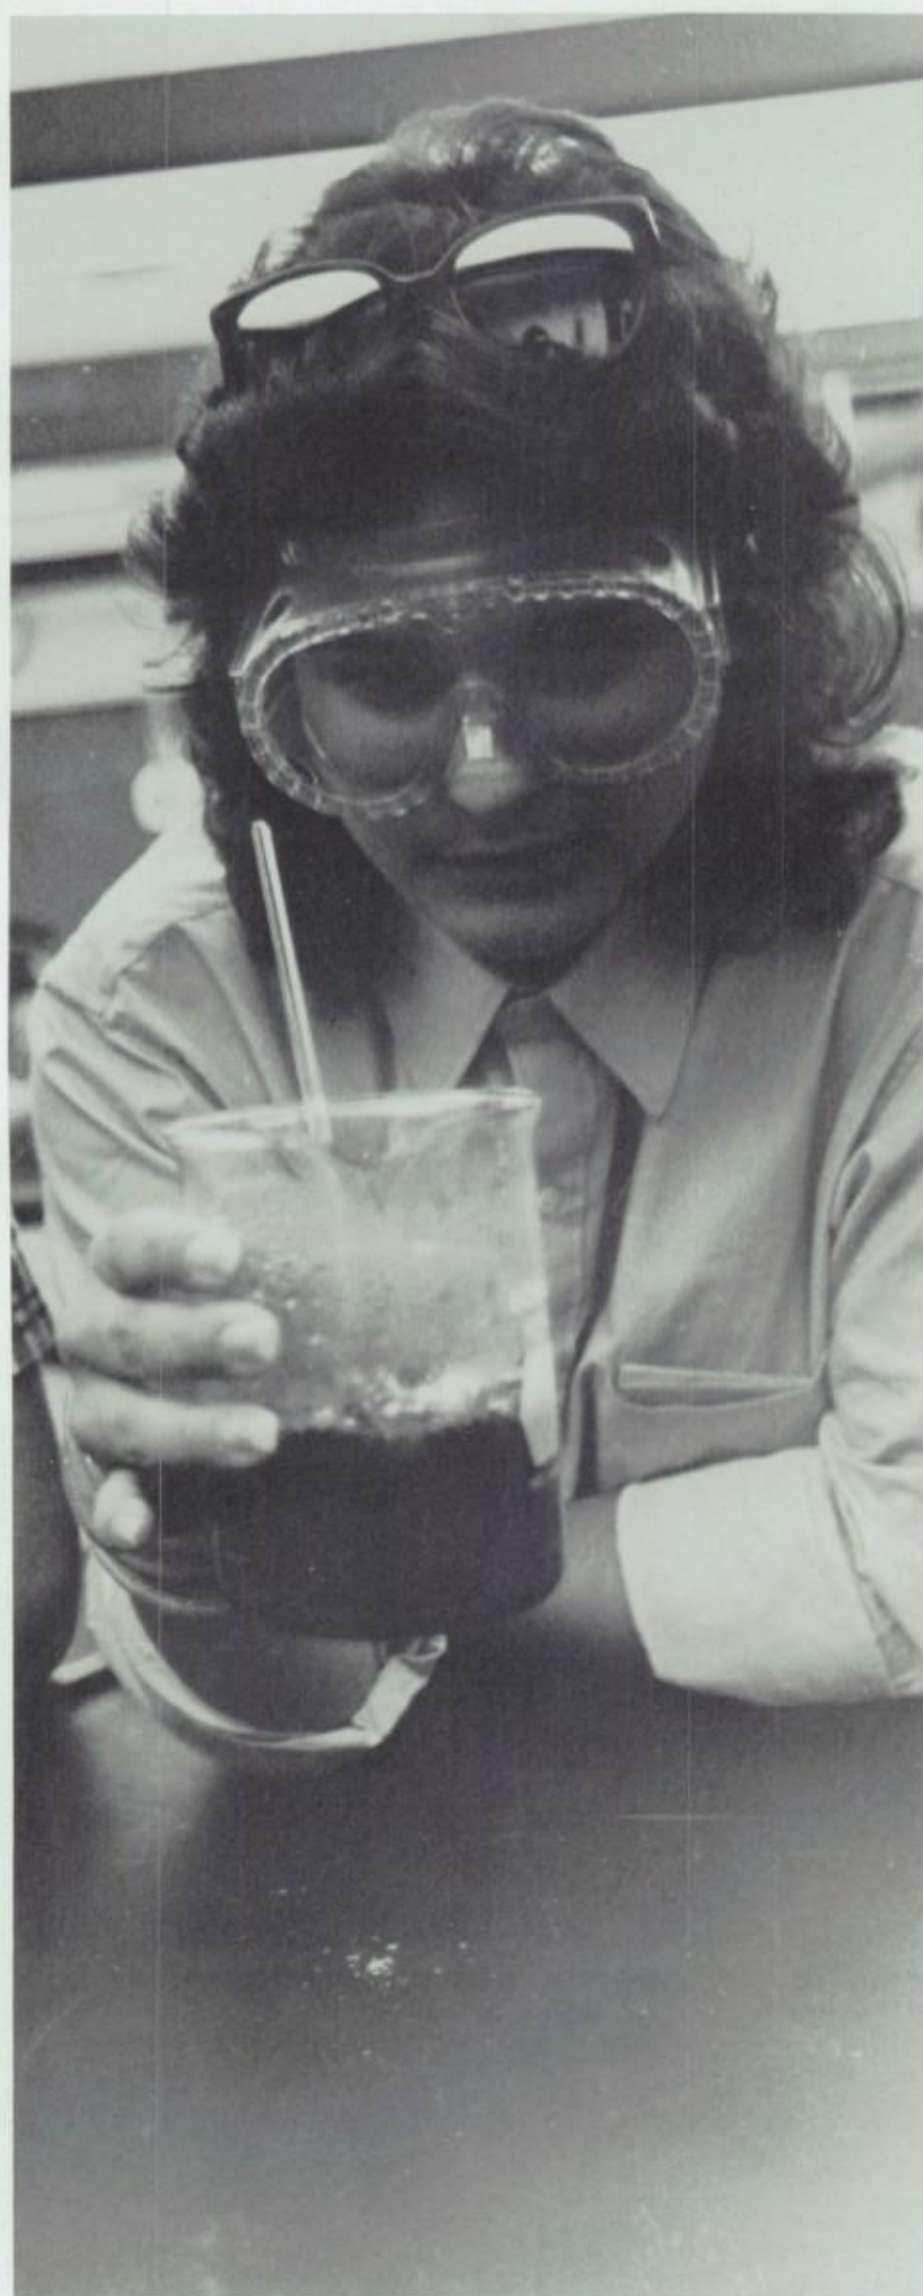

In addition to the teaching style, three new teachers were added to the staff; Carol Cary, Cathy Lovato, and Juliet Nwharir.

Due to the large number of sophomores, six biology classes were added to the already overcrowded schedule. Even with her heavy class load, Lisa Parr found time to earn a Rotary International Scholarship to study birds in . . . Tasmania?

With the benefit of such diverse experiences, the science department enhanced the students' education.

Miles Apart?

P.E. and Driver's Ed. Intersect

Some people think that running a mile and driving a mile are a world apart. Actually, they are very similar. They both require physical as well as mental reaction.

A combination of both skills was evident in the traffic safety department. The drug unit course expounded on the hazards of drugs and driving.

Mr. McGowan said, "The drug unit course makes the student aware of the problem that we have in today's society."

P.E., while offering the typical classes explored a new angle with a push in the department which integrated sports into the family scene. Participation in various sports with family and friends was stressed.

Although physical education and traffic safety seemed miles apart, in actuality, roads were crossed by advancing proper skills as well as the proper attitudes in both classes.

Head Start

New Course Helps Many

Once again, the math department lived up to its tradition of excellence. As Department Head Mrs. Thiele stated, "Our department looked forward to helping our students be the best math students possible."

Counting on extra help, 300 students willingly signed up for the department's new course, Math Quad. Math Quad was designed to help students who had passed general math, but did not feel ready to tackle the challenge of Algebra I.

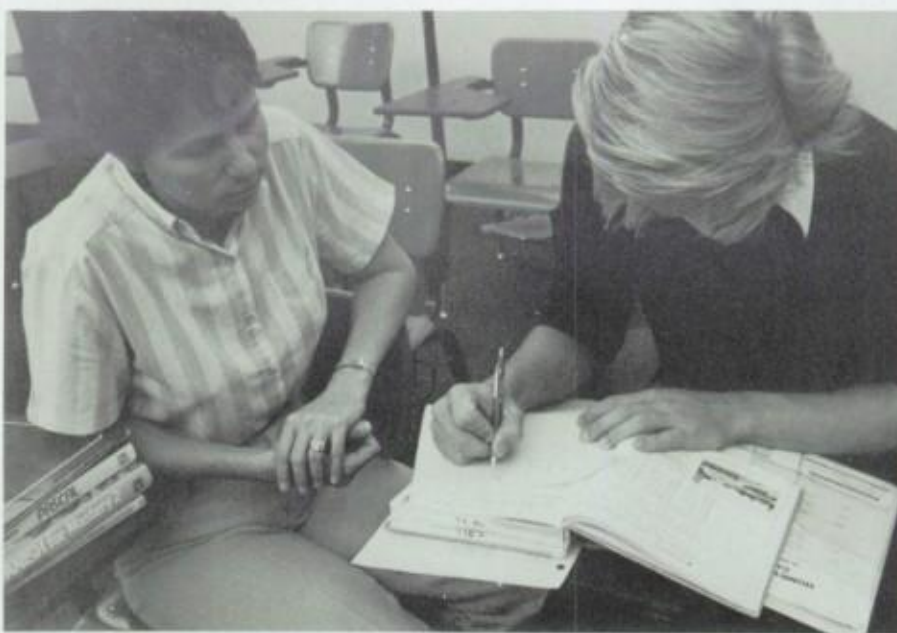

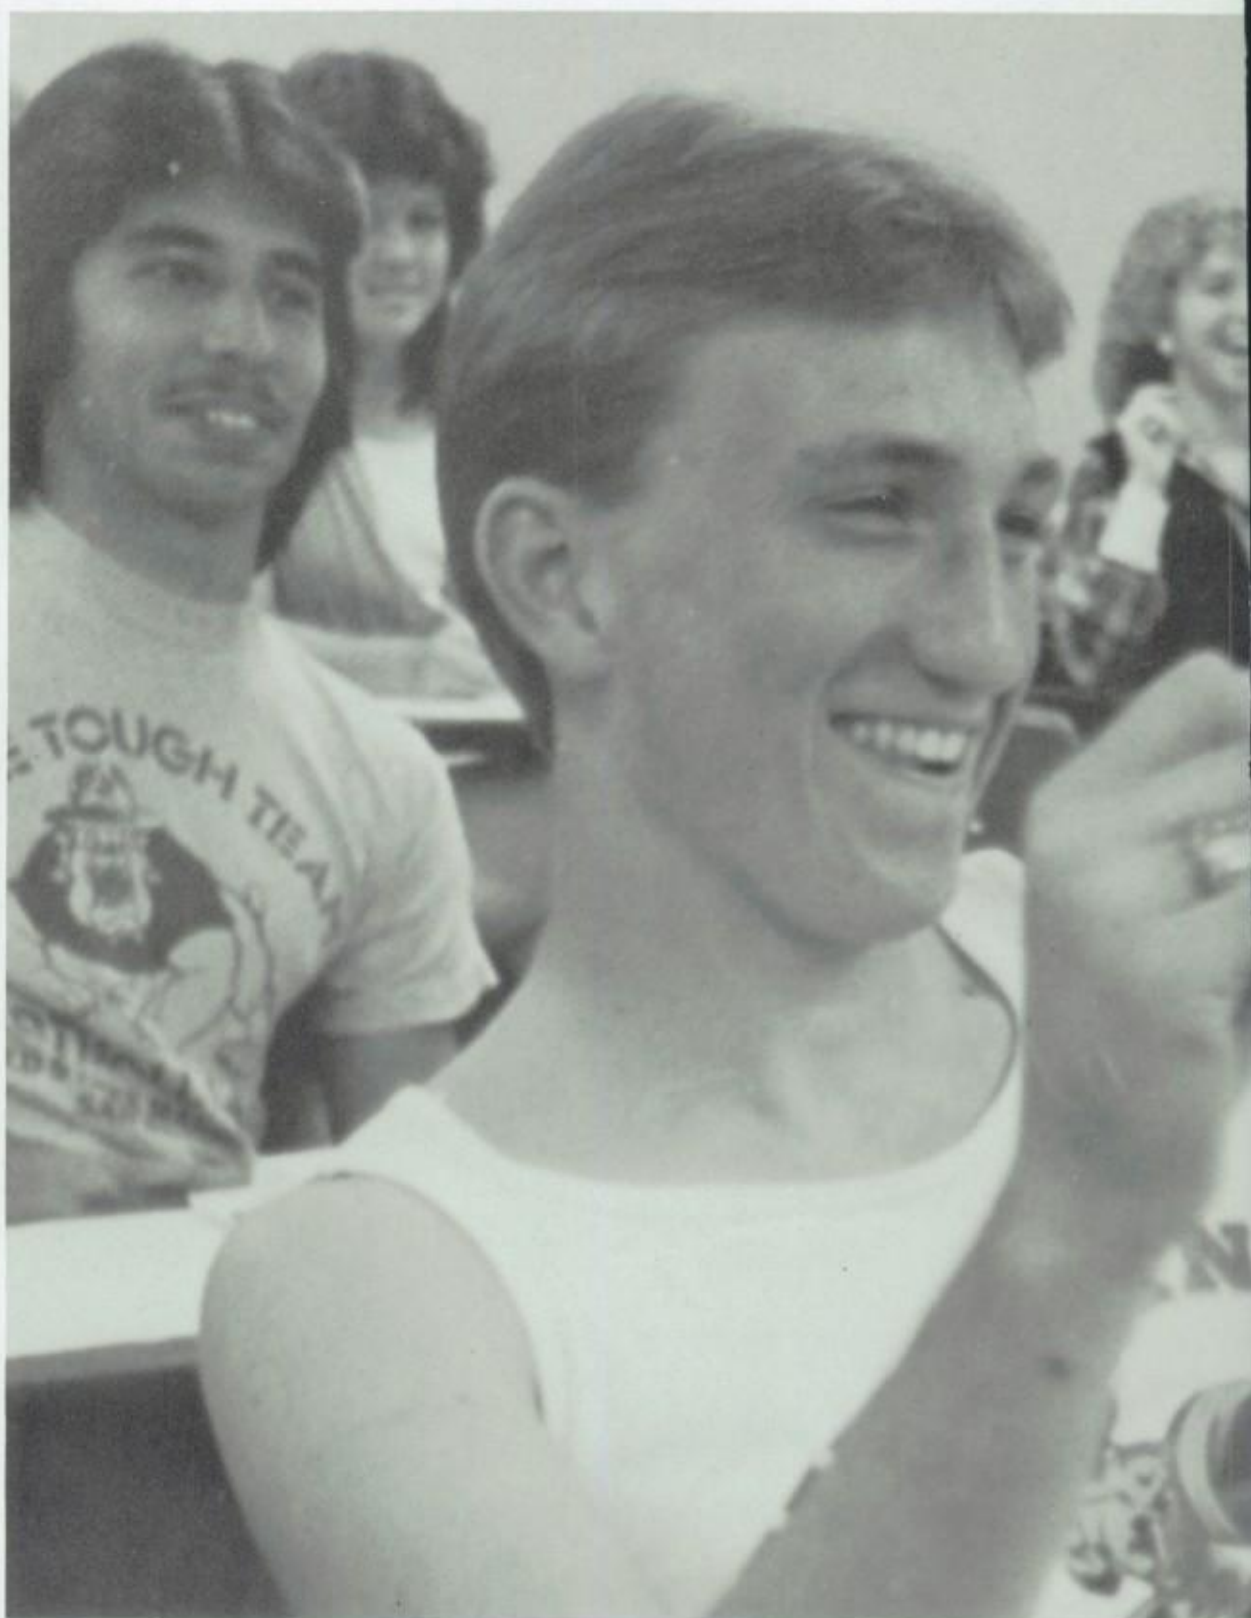

While in this class, students became secure about advancing into more difficult courses. They acquired a knowledge of Algebra I concepts which gave them a head start. According to Mrs. Thacker, "This exciting new course was undoubtedly worthwhile."

Although emphasis was placed on Math Quad, the department continued to offer a variety of courses at all levels.

School ... work

Business and Home Ec. Get Into Action

Looking into the business and home ec. areas, it was obvious students were really learning. Not only were they mastering real world skills, but they were putting them into action.

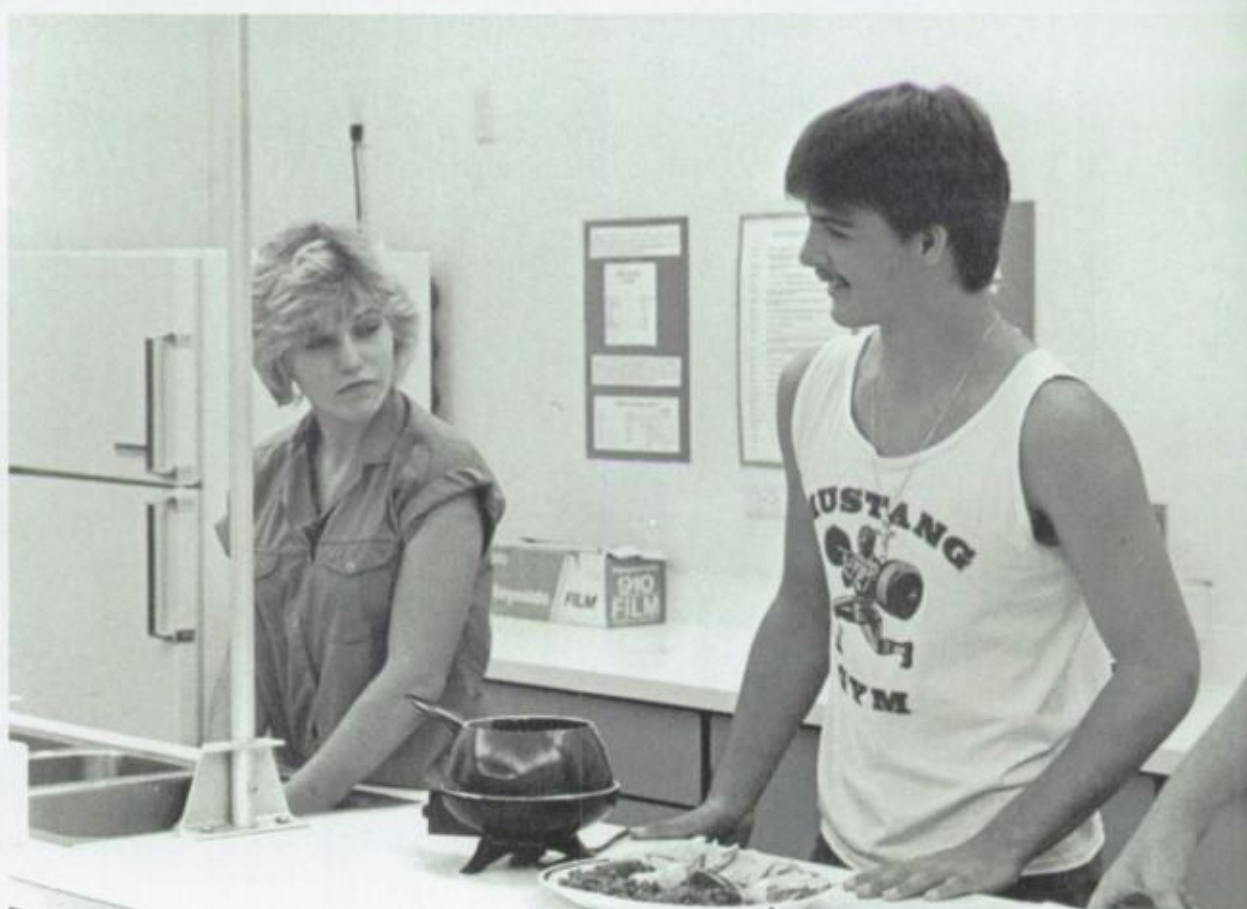

This was evident in the "Corral", the student-run restaurant in home ec. The foods lab was transformed using professional touches of candlelight sit down dinners and food made from scratch. Leonard Reid said, "It's not only fun, but I can use this experience in the real world."

The real world was also obvious in the business department's student store. "Employees" put all their business law, typing, shorthand and accounting skills into practice while trying to please the customers. Andrea Bachler was glad she was allowed to work in the store because it gave her a chance to use all her marketing skills.

Overall, the hands-on experiences offered in these two departments was a unique change from the daily routine of classes.

Making America

Industrial Arts Forms Tomorrows

Dashing to the workbench, the student seized the huge, heavy hammer, raised it above his head, and swiftly drew a smashing blow to his opponent. The stubborn nail in his creation had been conquered.

This was a familiar sight in the industrial arts department which not only consisted of woods, but drafting, welding, plastics, printing, manufacturing and auto shop. Each class was primarily a "learning by doing" experience according to Mr. Sucharski, teacher.

In addition, a new class, manufacturing, was unveiled. Its premise was similar to Junior Achievement — to create a product and market it.

By taking various classes offered, students explored different career possibilities such as engineering and business preparation. Industrial arts succeeded in training students for future occupations and careers.

Talking Abroad

Language Modifies Its Focus

Walking down the hall, different languages sounded from all directions. No, this was not a U.N. meeting, but the foreign language department. After stepping closer, it was obvious that these voices were not foreigners, but students practicing accents in the four languages offered — Spanish, German, French and Latin.

Trying a new angle, language classes changed from basic grammar and spelling to a focus on oral use of the language. New textbooks and visual aids contributed to this new angle.

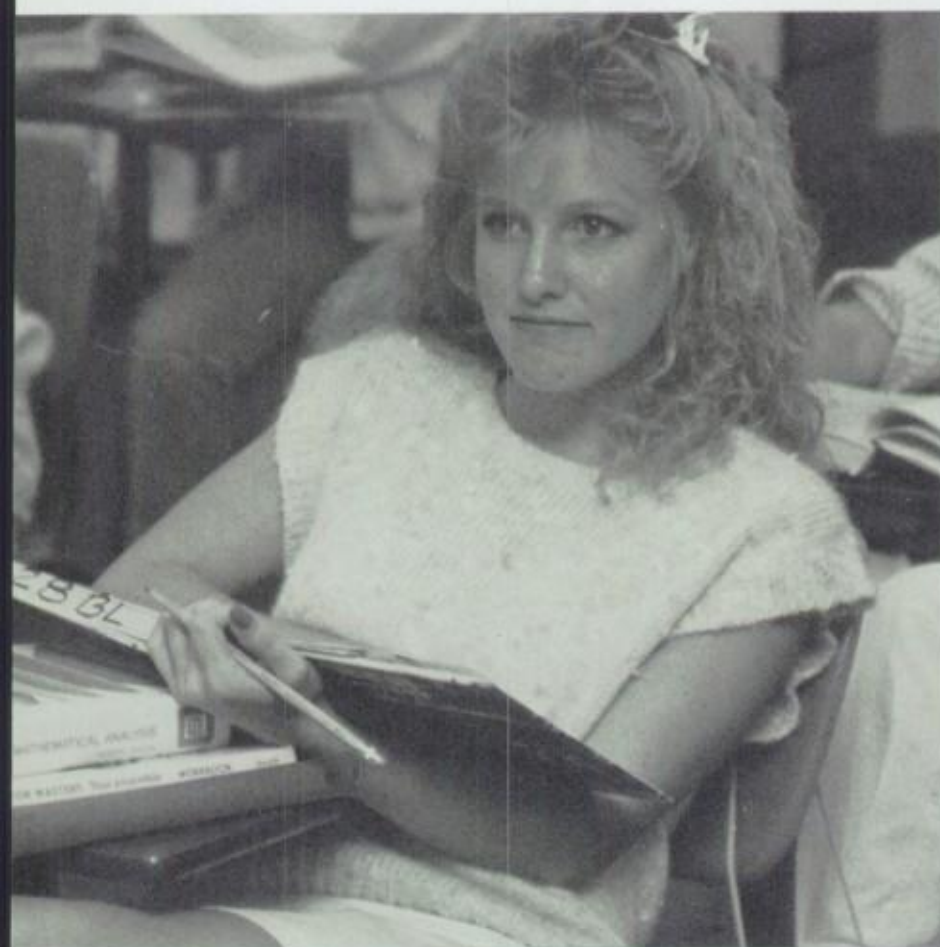

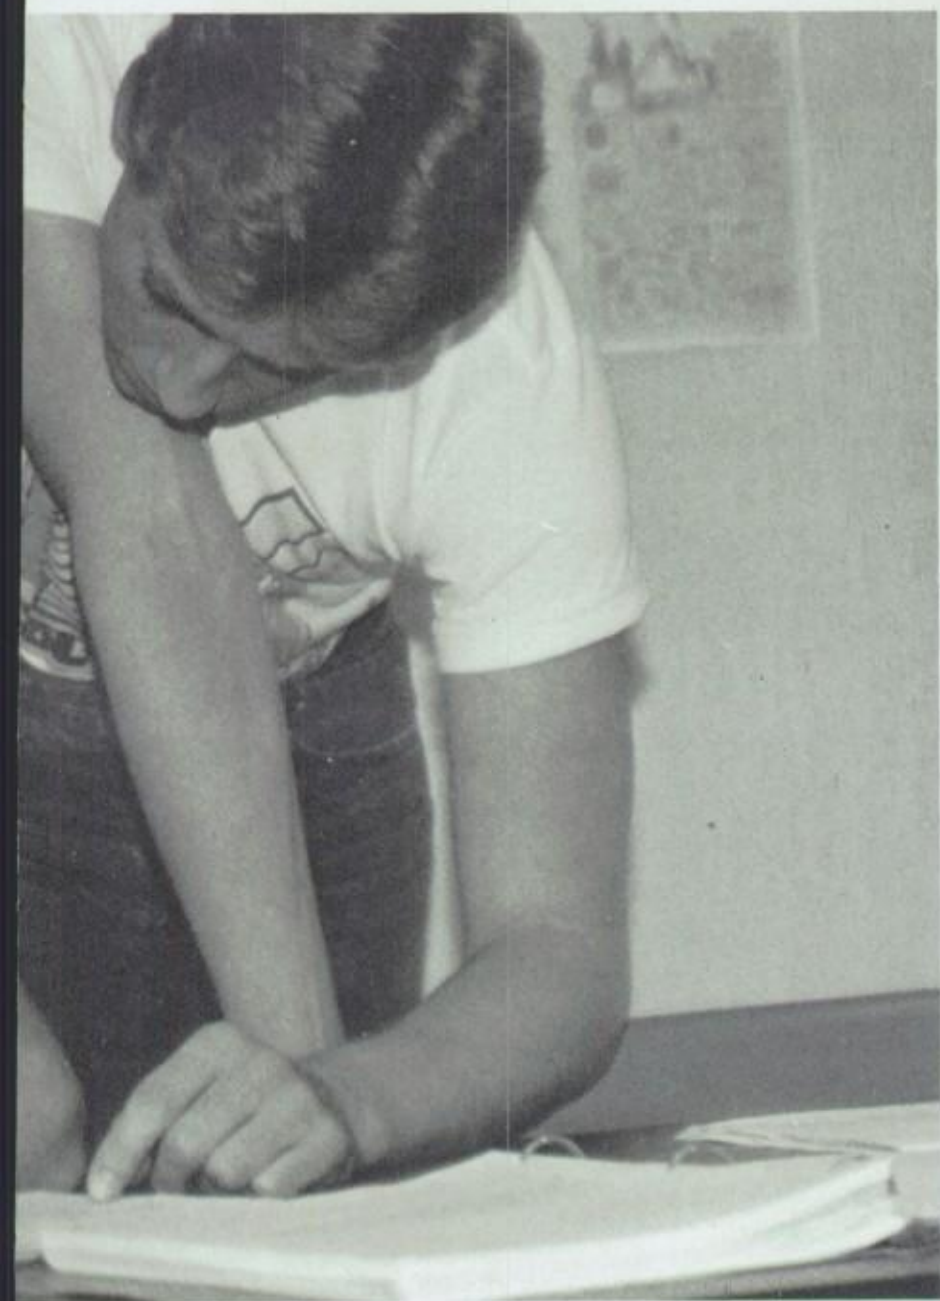

Since many universities now require two years of a foreign language for entrance, enrollment was high in all classes. The larger classes actually increased student interest and participation. Senior Chris White explained, "To learn another language is to learn another world."

Molding Writers

English Employs Electives

Bombs detonating in the background, a reporter appeared live on TV informing viewers of the events. Where had that reporter received his first taste of journalism? Probably in an elective English course.

Such elective courses, as journalism, yearbook, speech, critical thinking research, Principles of English 3, and debate, were commonplace in the English department. These classes provided interested students with more than the "basics". Referring to her elective classes, Mrs. Conder said, "I love them! Good communication is the most important skill a person can have!"

To apply their English skills, reading was vital. Different classes were offered, according to students' varying abilities. With enthusiasm, teachers forged ahead, creating critical thinkers and writers.

A Bit More

Fine Arts Adds Class

Chorus, drama, band, and orchestra — performing arts had it all and more.

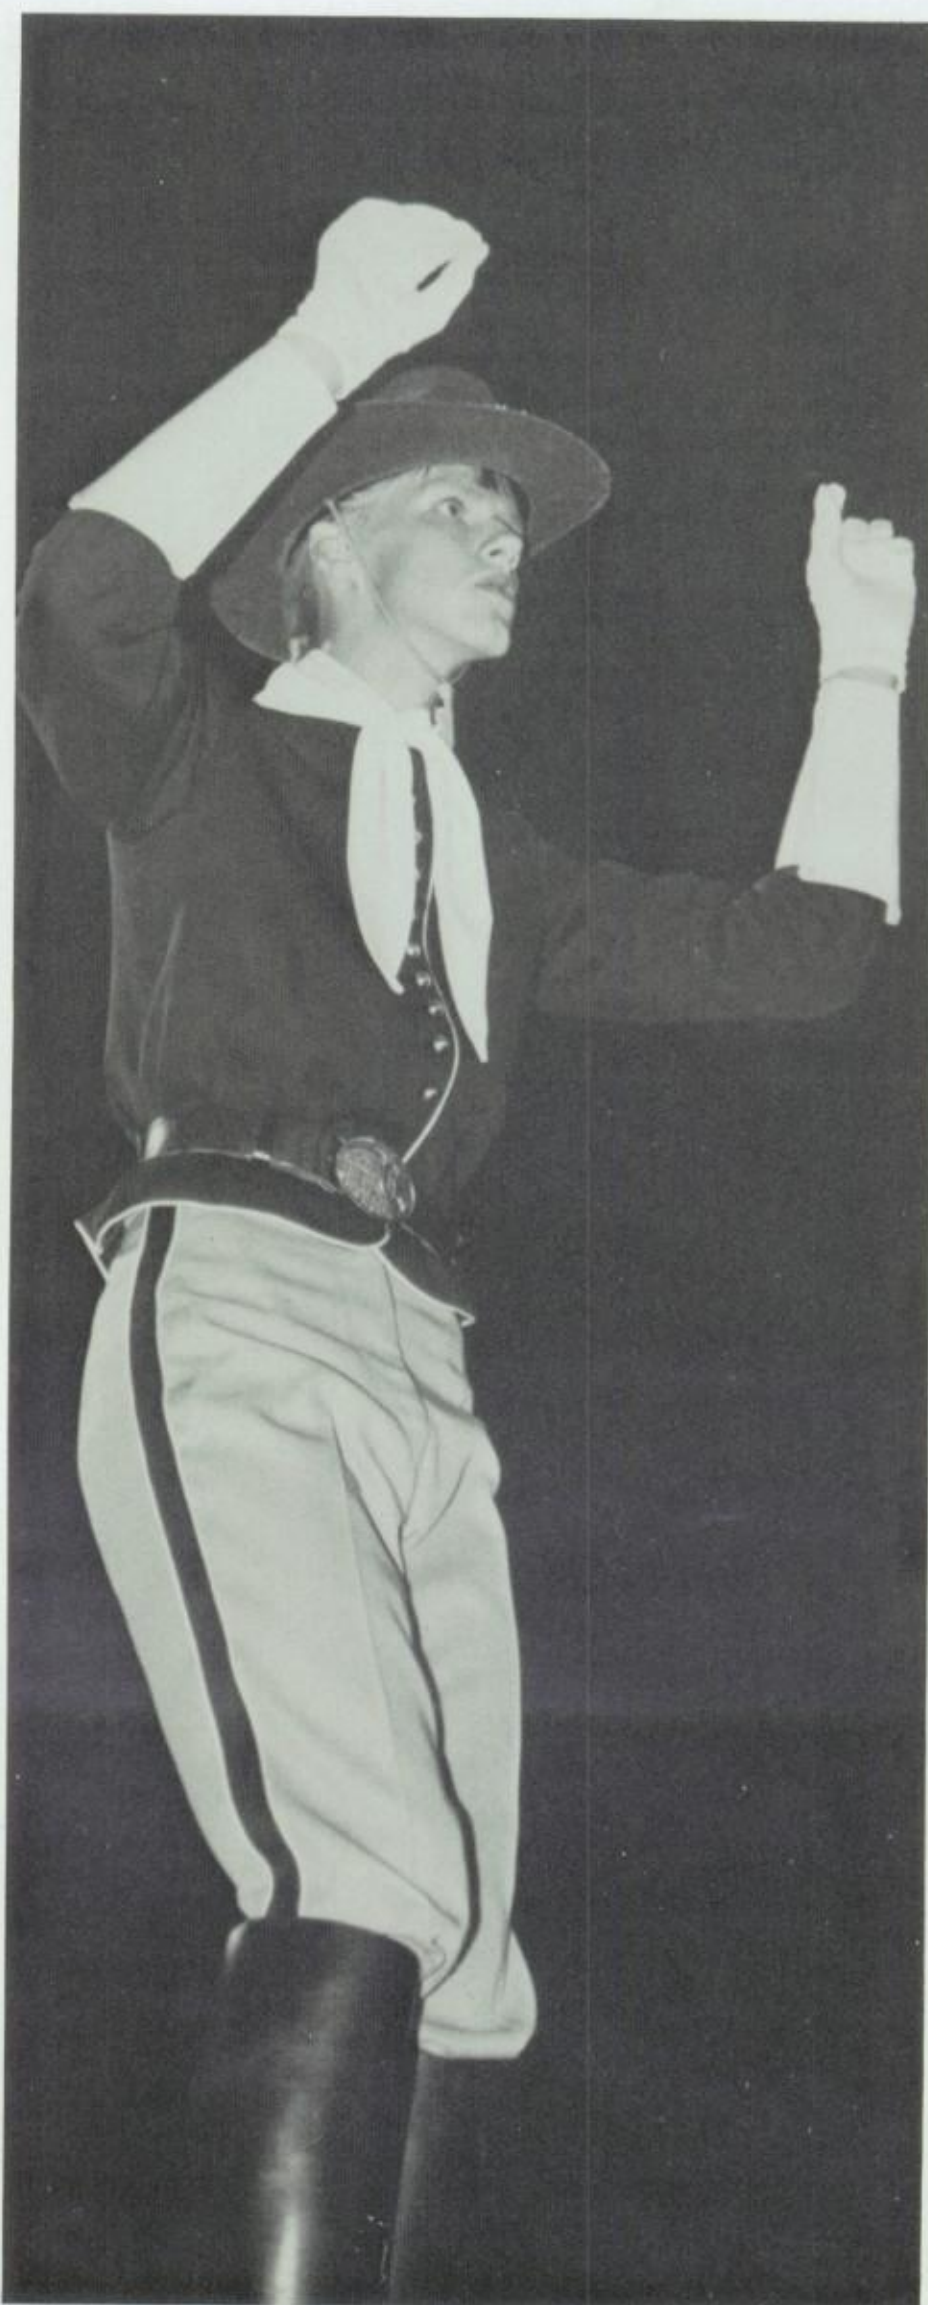

For instance, Chorale Choir combined the talents of more advanced vocalists. In drama, theater-in-the-round enabled actors to be viewed from all angles, thus drawing the audience into the performance. Also, band took on a new dimension including more complicated choreography enlivening the arrangement of routines. Cooperation by the orchestra members gave it a family-like relationship and resulted in more polished performances.

All of the efforts of the staff and the students made working together easier and much more successful. According to Mr. Evans, "The most important thing is to give a little of yourself and work well with others." And that's exactly what happened!

All art students were warned on the first day of school: "If you feel something creeping up your leg — watch out!"

The art department was under siege by an army of arachnids; poisonous black widow spiders had invaded. No casualties, however, were reported.

Through the invasion, classes such as drawing, photography, and painting were tailored to advance a student's special talents.

"It was wonderful to have a student express himself in a successful, positive manner," said instructor Yvonne DeVane.

Agriculture Class Opens New Doors

The agriculture department was not just horses, sheep and crops — it was an expanding market which was emphasized in a new class called agriculture business. It was the first of its kind in the nation opening up several exciting opportunities including substantial scholarships and television appearances.

Students in agriculture were helped to prepare for various careers. "I know agriculture will help me in the future. It's not just farmers, it's a business producing rapidly," said Kathy Flynn, a student in horse production who plans to be a veterinarian.

Into Action

Government Students Learn by Doing

Where else could you have ridden in a police car, dabbled in the stock market, and explored the human mind but in social studies? While most students were learning from lectures and books, students in social studies learned through active involvement. Some American government students, were required to do a semester project. Although some did reports, most opted for "on the spot" involvement. Projects undertaken were ride-alongs with police and search and rescue teams. Other activities included attending trials, shadowing lawyers and working on campaign slates. At the end of the eight hour projects, students wrote a mandatory evaluation. Joyce Godfrey, teacher, said, "the purpose of these projects was to show that government isn't just there but something you live and use everyday."

Trying A New Angle

in Sports

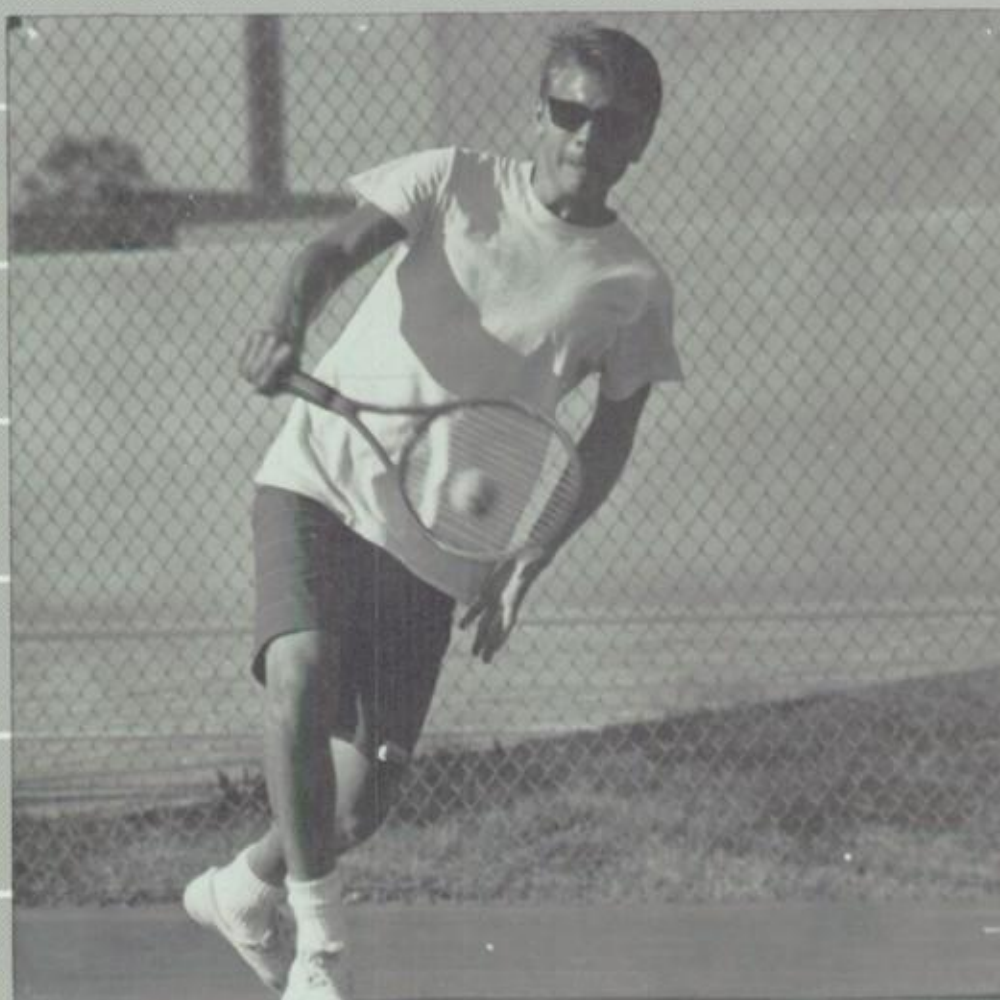

Striving to provide students with a well-rounded education, competitive athletics was a major aspect of learning on campus. Coaches sought to teach the old, valued concepts of camaraderie, cooperation and competition from a new angle.

Student-athletes were encouraged to participate for fitness, fun and the unparalleled thrill of competition. Sports also provided students with values and lessons they could benefit from in real life, such as the necessary mental and physical training, undying persistence and the winning attitude.

The programs offered at Dobson represented a microcosm of the sporting world; students could choose from football, basketball, baseball, swimming, tennis, track, cross country, soccer, wrestling, softball, golf, volleyball and badminton.

Whether the sport involved the teamwork of a certain group or the individual abilities of a talented player, the pride and devotion of Dobson athletes was always evident.

Team Sets Precedent

There were six seconds remaining on the clock. The cheering crowd anxiously awaited as junior Quin Rodriguez prepared for the final field goal. As the last second ticked away, the crowd rose to its feet shouting its approval as the ball sailed between the goal posts. Students eagerly swarmed onto the field to offer congratulations to the victorious team, who had just fulfilled the coach's dream of winning over the Mountain View Toros for the first time in the history of Dobson High. Other games throughout the year were also rewarding as the team gained the strength and power to become the best that had ever been produced.

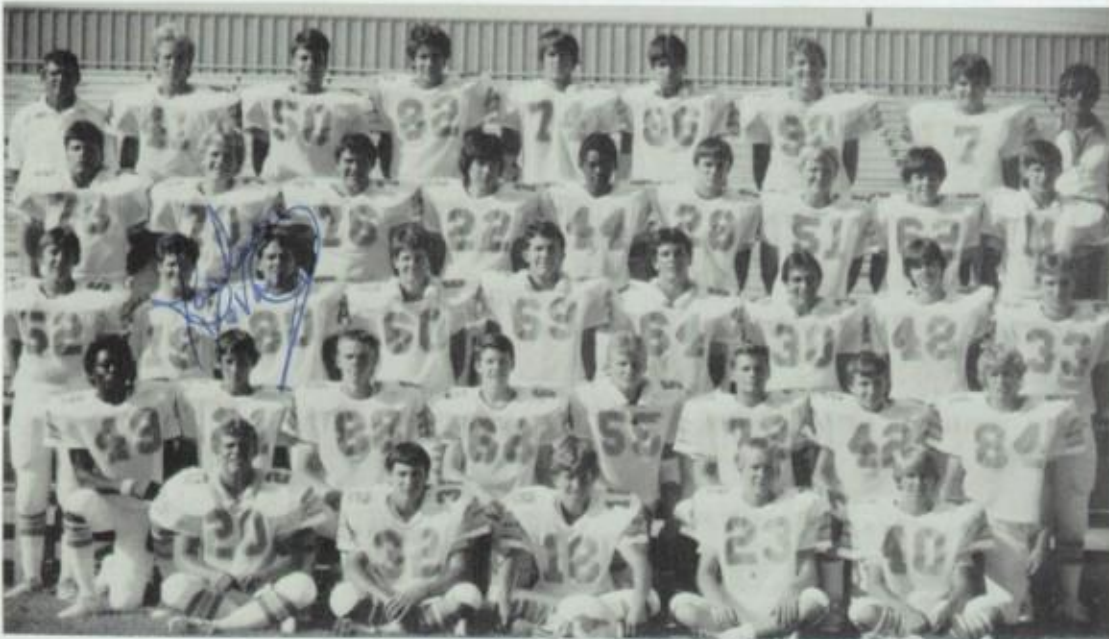

With an outstanding offense and a defense that was sensational, the football team had everything going for it. Acting as a unit, 34 turnovers were caused, six of which were against Marcos de Niza. Coach Clark said, "I was very proud of our offense, they came through." With attitudes like senior Bryan Fernau's who said, "It gave me the best feeling. The best part of football is crunching someone," it's no wonder that the defensive line was so tough.

Precedent

Junior Eric Vallier commented that not only did their team have that special spirit between each other but they also felt their coaches were the best.

The season was very successful and rewarding for the varsity football team. Coach Clark summarized, "They say preparation makes opportunities. It's an old coaches saying, but it's true — you're just trying to make something happen. We did and that's football!"

If practice makes perfect, then the Blue and Silver football teams deserved to be the best. It was proved that they had stamina to win against some tough opponents during the season.

Intense concentration was required to play winning football, and both teams had this ability. Junior Cal Schaefer commented, "I had to keep my mind on the game and put 100% of my efforts into every play." Players are not a team unless they act as a unit. "Through friendship, we developed teamwork," sophomore Greg Boland said.

Both JV football teams' hard work and dedication brought them through a successful season.

Smashing Birdies to Success

"Our teammates really pulled together to make this year's badminton team one of the best that I've coached. All of the players are highly skilled and better conditioned than our opponents." commented Coach Nancy Ellis.

The playing of the varsity badminton team was successful as they finished their season with a record of ten wins and two losses. The victorious junior varsity team also had a successful season having gone undefeated all twelve games. Part of their winning strategy was looking for the opponents weaknesses, analyzing them, and planning accordingly. Practicing skills and techniques as a team, contributed in winning games and prevailing against competitors in divisionals.

One of the outstanding players, Amy Coyle, received first place in her singles tournament at the Chaparral Invitational. Sugar Yazzie and Kathryn Wilson won their doubles tournament also taking the team title.

In the state championship, the team did a superb job and placed third. Amy Coyle did well by placing second in her singles tournament.

A combination of team effort, talent, and competitiveness made the season a success.

Shooting Sub-par

"It was probably the best golf team we ever had," commented golf coach Denis McGowan, "it had definitely improved over last year's team."

This improved team stormed to a third place finish in divisionals which sent them to state. Enroute to this accomplishment, the team went 16-0 for their first undefeated year. Their performance put them at 39-0 for two years which was teamwork at its best.

The team competed for the top five spots with nine holes of daily play. These five players competed in matches on Tuesdays and Thursdays. "Along with being undefeated in our matches, we achieved our goal of making state competition," said Coach McGowan, "which was very fulfilling."

In the state championship, Dobson placed third. Although frustrated with their performance, the loss makes the team yearn for victory next year.

A Wave of Excellence

A wave of excitement rolled into the pool as the girl's swim team worked out. Accompanied by constant moral support from Coach Mickleson and each other, they practiced weeks before school started, aiming for perfection.

Their early anticipation paid off. They retained their third season as undefeated City Champions. Their tough rotary relay and divisional competition established a strong foundation for them to place second in state.

Senior, Debbie Cadzow commented, "Being like a family, we can always count on each other for a boost of moral support." It was obvious that this camaraderie contributed to the team's success. They always had a group cheering at the other end of the pool, and a coach who was well involved with their personal attitudes and goals.

Although each girl was like a single droplet of water, they all contributed to the wave of the team's success.

Triumph Prevailing

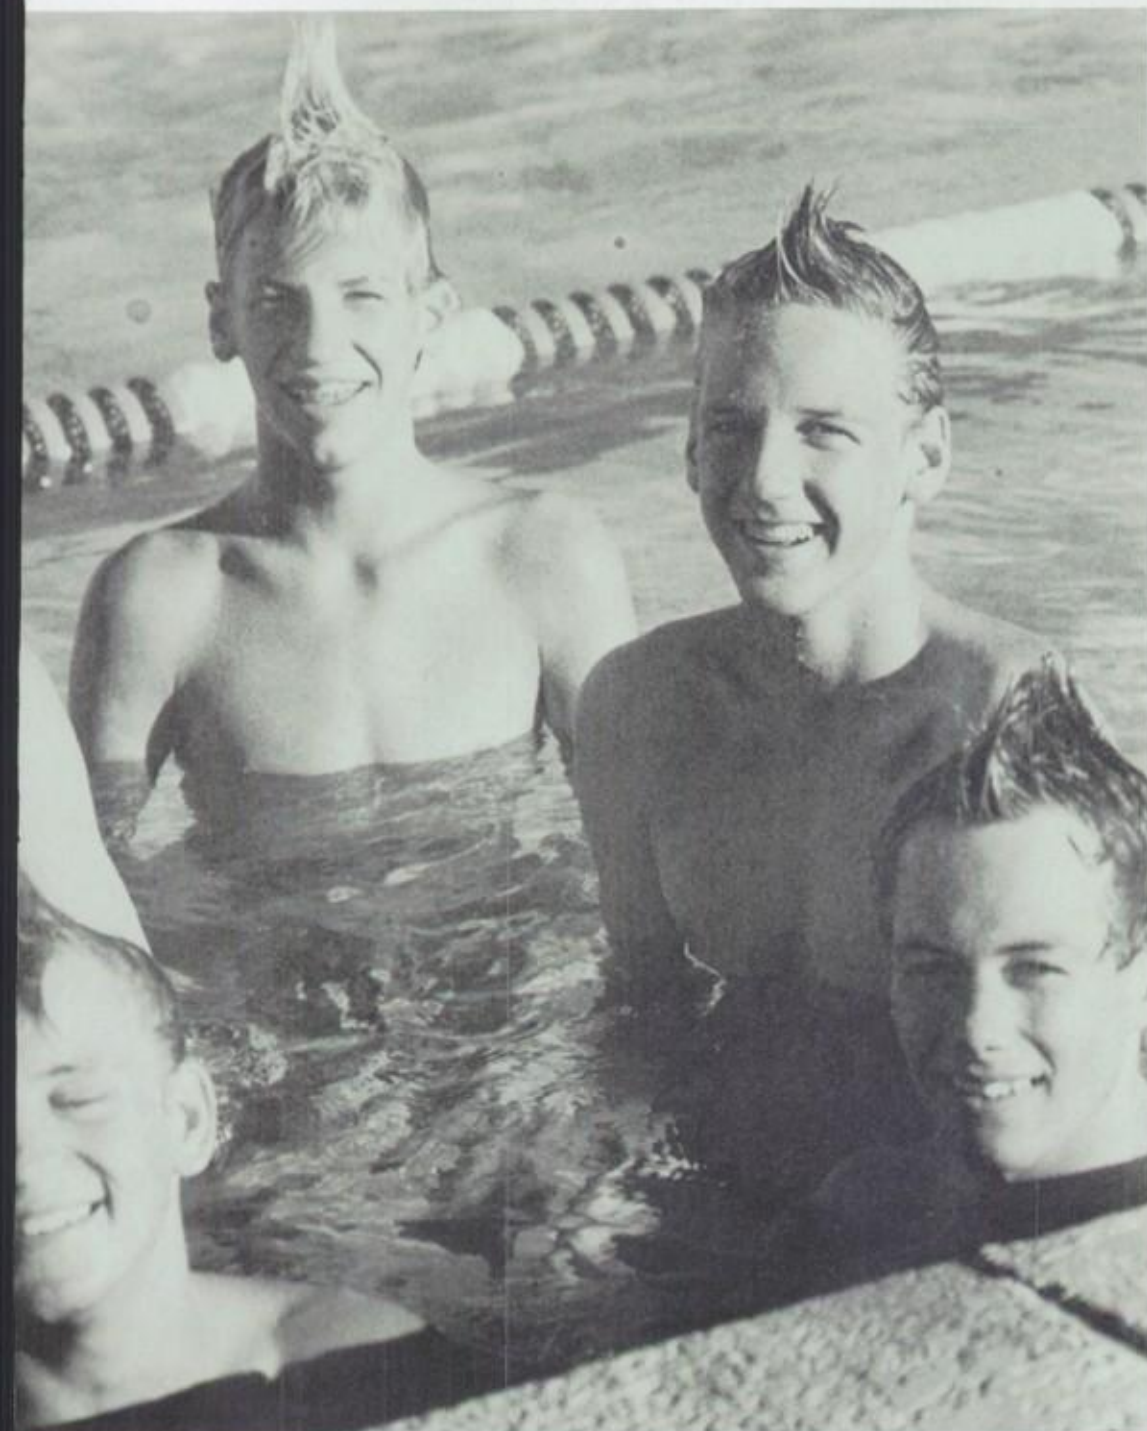

"Who's hungry?!" yelled Coach Anderson, and, in unison, the team grunted "Me!!!"

The boys' swim team was "continuously hungry," or in other words continuously doing their best. Aided by a strong relay squad, as well as aggressive individuals, the team's "hunger" attained a solid undefeated record. The team went on to capture a first place tie at the Rotary Relay meet, a close second at City, another second at Divisionals, and tenth position at State.

Consistent performances were a result of individualized workouts and team unity under Jeff Anderson's leadership. Coach Anderson commented on the uniqueness of this year's team. "The special unity we had . . . We're together for workout and recreation. We could work hard and play hard. We could get to business, and when it was all over, have fun and be jokers. I am already looking forward to next year . . . year number two of the Dobson Swim Team Dynasty!"

No Wimps Allowed

Even before the sun came up the girls were out at practice, ready to show they weren't wimps when it came to cross country. To further prove this they had a practice everyday and two on Tuesdays and Thursdays; the second of which was spent lifting weights.

Adding to their grueling regimen, the seventeen girls were seen running through local neighborhoods at 5:00 in the morning. Fountain Hills, Kiwanis Park, and Papago Park were a welcome change of scenery during their six mile runs.

Even the seemingly relaxing bus ride was prime time for activity — this time mental! Upon arrival at their meets, individual preparation and group stretching were routine. The finale was a team cheer which boosted their morale and filled them with winning spirit.

Together To the Finish

"The fear of Coach makes me get up at 5:30," co-captain Doug Brophy asserted. It may well be this fear that prompted each member of boys' cross country to practice at 5:30 in the morning, but it was pure dedication and love of the sport that motivated them in the sleepy hours before school and the two grueling hours after.

Drastic changes made for a totally different boys' cross country team. A new line-up of varsity runners was encouraged by new head coach Dan Durant. Lacking the depth the freshmen runners were able to offer, the team consisted of seven varsity and six junior varsity members. Although categorized as varsity and junior varsity, Coach Durant didn't think of his team that way but stated, "I think of it all as one team."

Teamwork was the key to their success. Even though each individual had his own personal goals to accomplish, he took time out to help his comrade through the rough spots.

So why did these eighteen self-motivated men suffer through the rigors of two-point-nine to six miles over hilly terrain each day? Receiving minimal recognition, each man did it for the love of his sport and his own personal satisfaction. Mike Routhier said, "I want them all to do well, so any encouragement I can offer, I will!"

Spiking the Punch

Watch out, Jamie Sommers and Steve Austin because The Lady Mustangs also have BIONIC "Believe It Or Not I (we) Can" powers.

Involving mental imagery before each play, which was as Michelle Santosuosso put it, "difficult to do when you're hyped for a game," the team strove for unity, confidence, 100% contribution, and one point, one game at a time.

This was most vividly accomplished in a rival match against undefeated Mountain View. Down one game, the Mustangs came back ferociously the next two to win the match.

Although "each individual was pretty much responsible for maintaining team spirit," according to Lynette Briggs, the whole group worked together rather than as six separate people. This helped to strengthen their defensive weaknesses in passing and quickness.

At divisionals, they made a stunning comeback against Tempe, and went on to soundly beat Mr. View. Later, they lost to the Chargers, and grabbed the second place title, qualifying for state. Going in, they had a record of 10 wins, 6 losses.

Setting Up for a Win

JV volleyball players also generated energy and enthusiasm with the expression "BIONIC in 1985." Although starting a tough season with all new players, the JV team showed its desire to win by consistently improving its game. Player Jennifer Bogart explains, "It was really hard in the beginning, but when we got to know each other, things just clicked. We became like a family."

During a game, the six players on the court were always backed up by the rest of the team and their fans. This spirit helped in games against their toughest opponents, Mountain View and Corona. To prepare for these teams in practice, the JV team worked drills in order to strengthen their weaknesses.

All season, the JV team bettered its game, proving themselves to be dedicated players.

Jumping To New Heights

It took more than great heights to make Varsity Basketball. Many of the juniors and seniors worked out during the off season realizing the intense competition they would have to face in the winter.

The team's previous experience was an important asset. Many of the players had been playing "hoop" since elementary and junior high school.

The group had overall quickness and strength, as well as outstanding individual intelligence and leadership. As a result, they were able to work on a variety of floor combinations and develop team unity.

Coach McConnell commented, "Hopefully our players will benefit in the future from the positive experiences as a member of our team."

Basketball

... New Heights

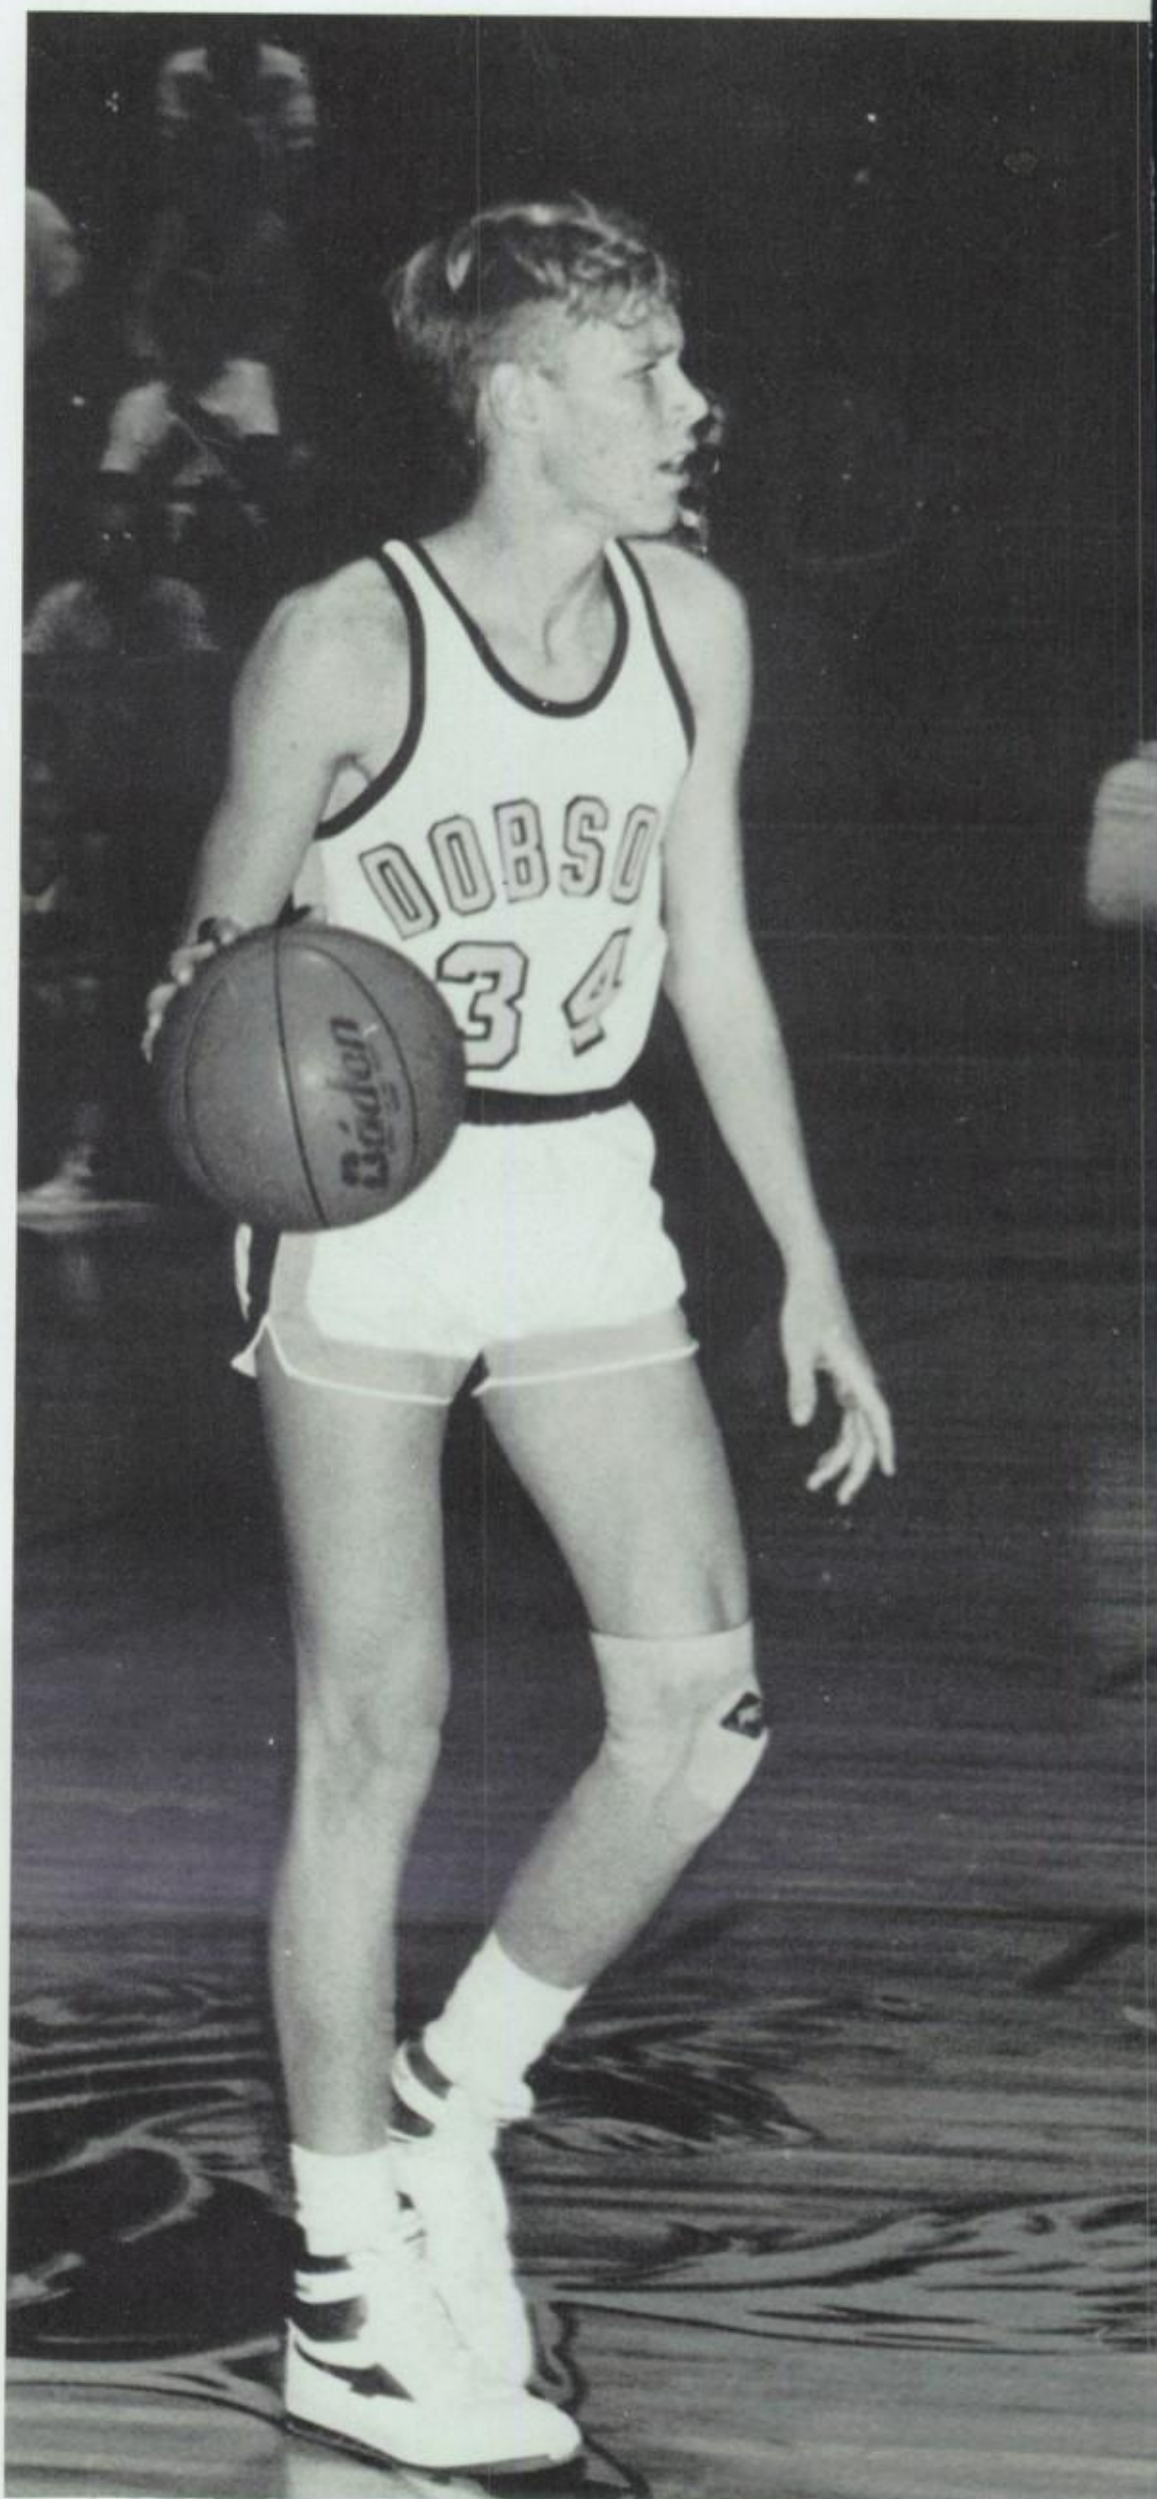

Giving 110% during each game, the J.V. basketball team overcame early difficulties faced by all JV teams, and bounded to a strong start. "Every year the team has a different personality and it takes time to figure out a game plan complimentary to the players' abilities," elaborated Coach McGowan.

Strong fundamentals were stressed, as was the need to play as a team in preparation for competing on the varsity level. The success of the varsity basketball program depended on the strength of its JV counterpart. Because of this, the varsity squad is sure to be competitive next season.

The Right Stuff

Girls made of "The Right Stuff" in the arts of dribbling, passing, and shooting became members of the few and the proud — the girls' varsity basketball team.

Yet, in order to meet the season's goals and challenges, the girls had to dedicate themselves to a commitment that superceded all others: working as a unit. While individual performances and talent were vital, they were simply interlocking pieces of the puzzle which created a complete picture after the year's twelve games had been played. "Our highest priority was to have a winning attitude and to play as a team, not as individuals," said Coach Frank Campos. Striving to perform together as a solid unit was the key to unlocking a successful season.

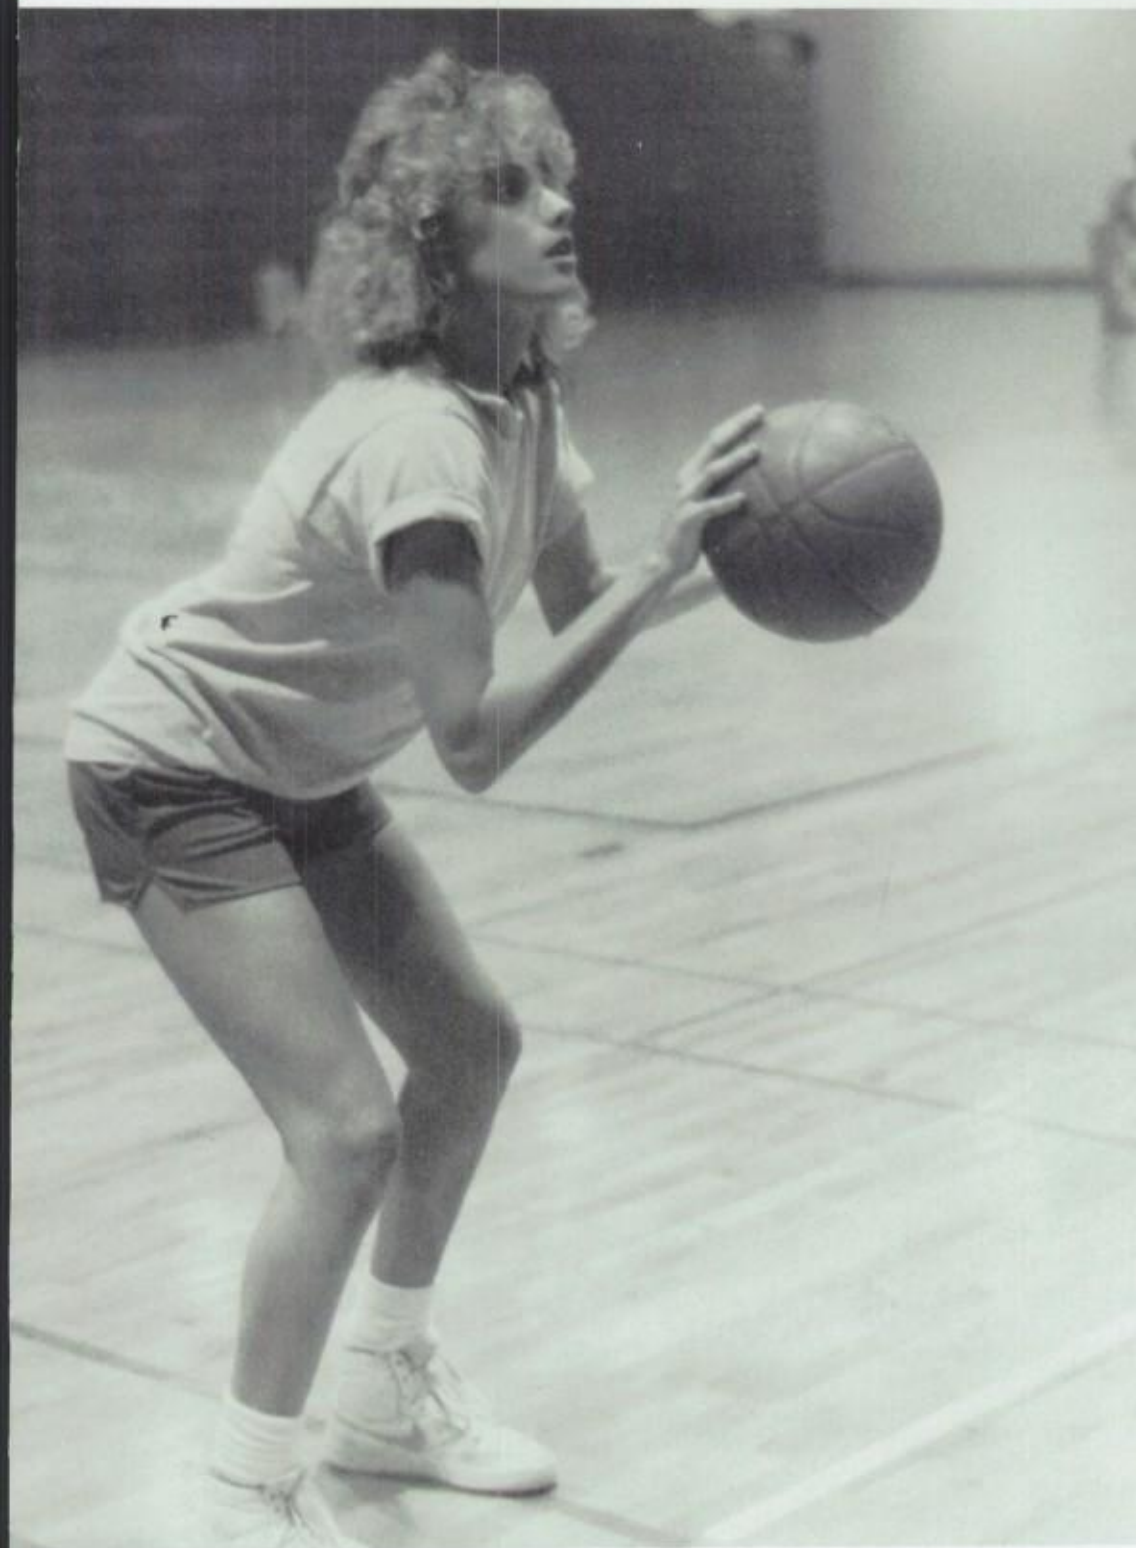

In addition, Coach Campos believed the lessons learned from working as a team could be used by the girls in life off the court. "By becoming a team with a winning attitude, the girls will learn the dedication and commitment that is required to succeed in life," he theorized.

A key point in the game-plan was defense. Evidently, the best offense was a good defense, later giving varsity the competitive edge they needed to reign supremely on the court.

The Right Stuff

Setting: The Mustang gym. Time: 5:30 p.m., last seconds of the game. Score: 46-46. A hush fell upon the crowd as Dobson sent its player to the free throw line. The shot was made. The crowd went wild as the Lady Mustangs ended the season with a victory.

This dream game was desired more and more as the season dwindled. Marcos de Niza, Mountain View, and Tempe High Schools were the toughest opponents the team faced. At the seasons end, the 12 J.V. players proved that dedication, determination, and teamwork were skills they possessed.

When asked what the main goal was, Coach Connie Mickelson replied, "Our main goal was to become more fundamentally sound both offensively and defensively and to make our opponents earn every rebound and point."

Winging It

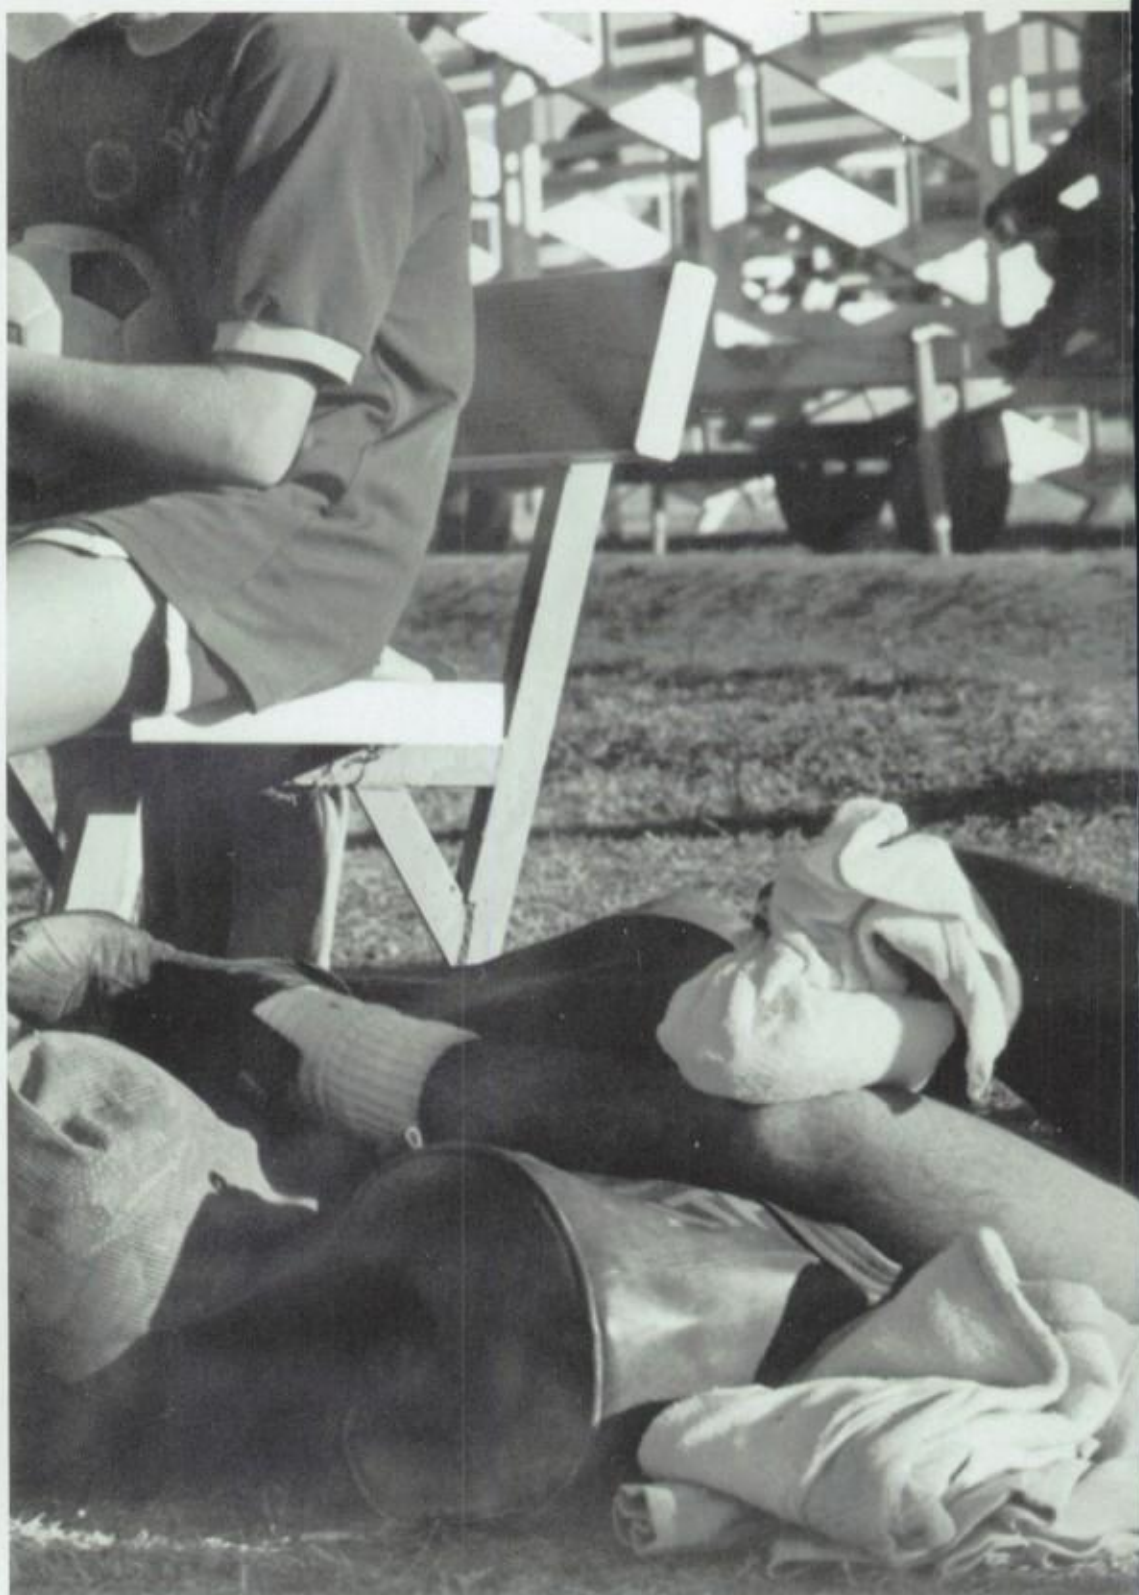

"Birds" have been known to talk but can they tell their "wings" to take a few laps and then hit the showers? It's possible if the varsity soccer coach is giving the orders.

It was like a fresh start for the varsity team with a new coach and only five returning seniors. Team effort and a positive attitude were stressed by Coach Bird who commented that their team motto was "Let's get 'unitized'."

The JV team was very strong-willed, expressing the desire to excel and win. Their slight weaknesses were easily made up for through teamwork and constant communication on the field during a game. Coach Kappas explained that one phrase the team always remembered was that "A winner never quits and a quitter never wins."

Vision Quest

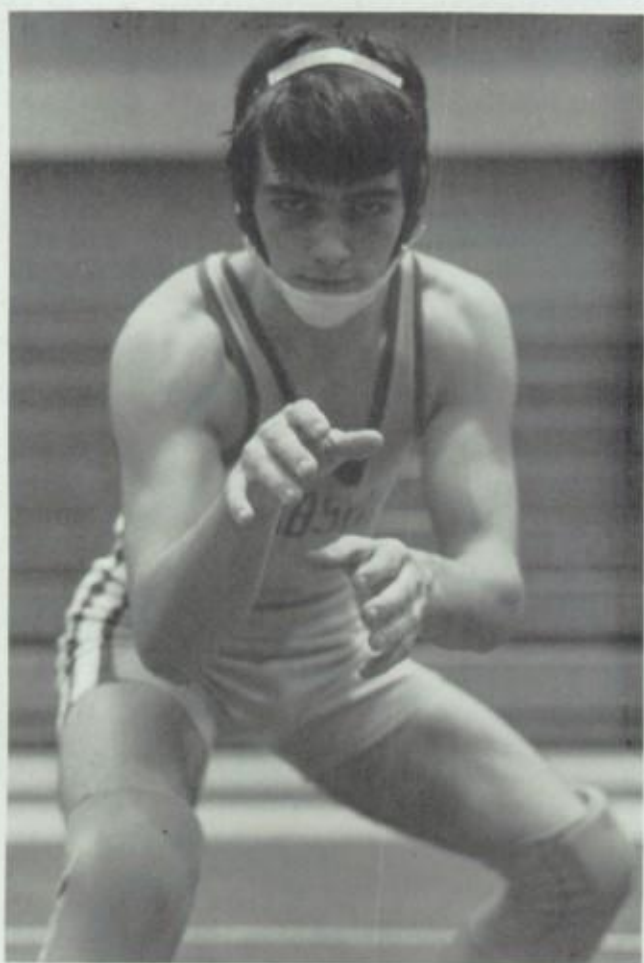

Visionquest. A dream that doesn't come just from the mind but also from the heart; once you've pictured it, your mind won't let go until that dream is yours. Our JV and varsity teams' visionquest was to capture the division title. In pursuit of their dream, all the wrestlers were confronted with the sacrifice of personal time, a social life, and the delicacies of food.

Basic conditioning prepared the teams for the challenge of Divisionals, enabling the wrestlers to peak at just the right time. Training involved running, wrestling, and lifting weights until they had achieved the trim, sinewy, physiques necessary for winning.

Besides the physical standards Coach Rudow set for the wrestlers, he sought to instill in them other assets, like courtesy for others and the perseverance to reach their goals; assets that would make them the type of person to be proud of later on in life.

The senior dominated varsity team set traditions and united all the teams through their experience gained in the last four years. Dual matches were the learning experiences to a successful conquest of their dream. Two close matches this season were against Tempe and McClintock, and both were won in the last few tension filled minutes. Ed Morales stepped up from JV to wrestle varsity against McClintock in a close match that

We Are Champs!

Above the locker room door, the sign read, "We are champions in every way!" Before every game, the varsity and JV softball teams reached up to touch the inspirational sign. The following game was always played with a positive attitude, and the opposing team didn't have a chance.

North High's varsity team discovered this during the Christmas Tournament at Papago Park. Ending with a score of 24 to 3, the girls stole 66 bases.

Outstanding achievements were caused by a strong sense of teamwork. Coach Ellis explained, "We always had it. They supported each other all the time." For example, the pitchers, alias "turtle team" because of their slowness, encouraged each other during all practices and games.

Champions

Ending with the best overall record in the league, 13-3, they went to Central Divisionals, and scraped by Chandler to become divisional champions. Triumphant, the girls went to State, but lost a tough game against Sahuaro High. Nevertheless, they were winners, and had a trophy to prove it.

The JV team also represented champions in every way. Finishing 17-0, they met all their goals. As Coach Campos remarked, "Our success had been because of the total team effort and dedication."

Also the team's attitude contributed to their success. Striving for excellence, the players were motivated by their competitiveness. They acted as a family, each girl helping one another.

The victorious JV softball team is expected to affect future varsity teams. With their winning attitude, Mustang softball won't settle for anything less than the best.

Dobson Fever

As spring fever hit Dobson, fans headed for the baseball field where varsity and J.V. baseball teams demonstrated their skills in the all-American sport. Spectators cheered as Marc Leathers struck an opponent out pitching, or as Eric VanHook hit another ball over the fence into a frustrated neighbor's yard. The rowdy crowd and energetic team members didn't let the spirit fade in a single inning during the season.

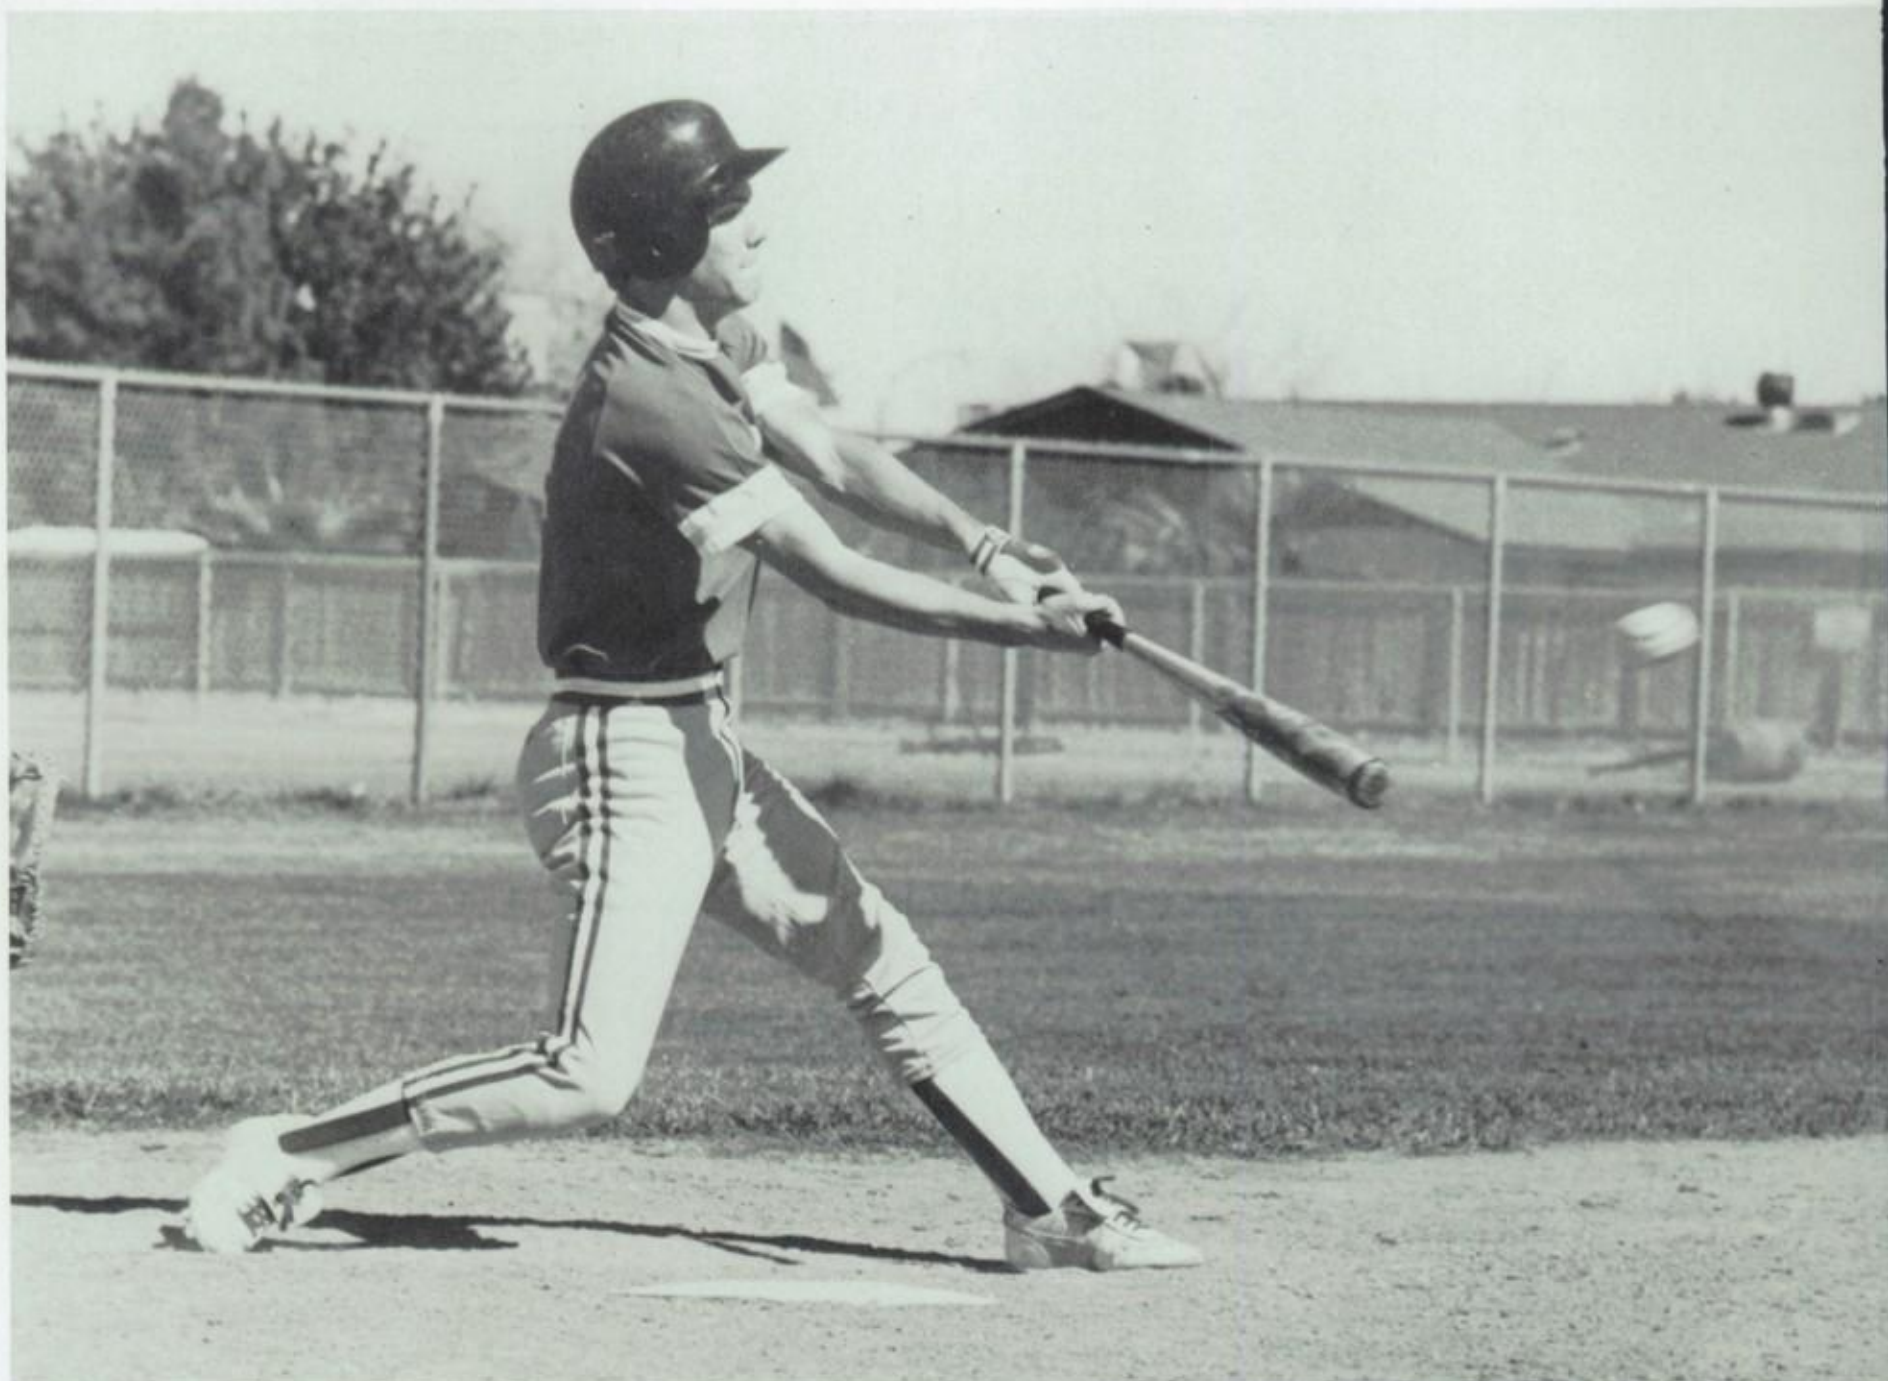

The combination of unity and a desire to win created a strong varsity team. It was led by seven returning players who combined with enthusiastic new players to create a close-knit family who shared a common interest of winning. Junior Darren "Bagel" Tewes said, "Baseball is a team sport. A victory is shared by the whole team and not by any one individual."

The team spent many after school hours and weekends practicing, striving to achieve the team goals of improving as the season progressed and qualifying for playoffs at the end of the season. Frequent instruction from the coaching staff headed by Scott Morgan kept the team working hard.

The players were eager to express their pride in belonging to the varsity team and playing for Dobson's coaching staff. Senior Robert Marquardt added, "With our excellent coaching staff, and the fact that we were working more as a unit, we had the potential to go all the way."

In addition to practices and games, both teams participated in the slug-a-thon to raise money for their program, and a scrimmage on February 21. Although JV lost, both teams supported each other throughout the entire season. Sophomore Mason Rudolph stated, "It really made us enthusiastic to know the varsity team would help us during practices and cheer for us during games."

The JV team, coached by Dave Tarrent, also worked hard and played to the best of their ability. They displayed constant determination and dedication.

Both teams showed outstanding effort and sportsmanship during the season. They constantly displayed the attitude necessary to maintain their reputation for winning.

Game, Set, Match

The aspiration to achieve their goals was very helpful to the success of the girls' tennis team this season. One of their highest goals was to qualify as many players as possible to compete in divisionals and state tournaments.

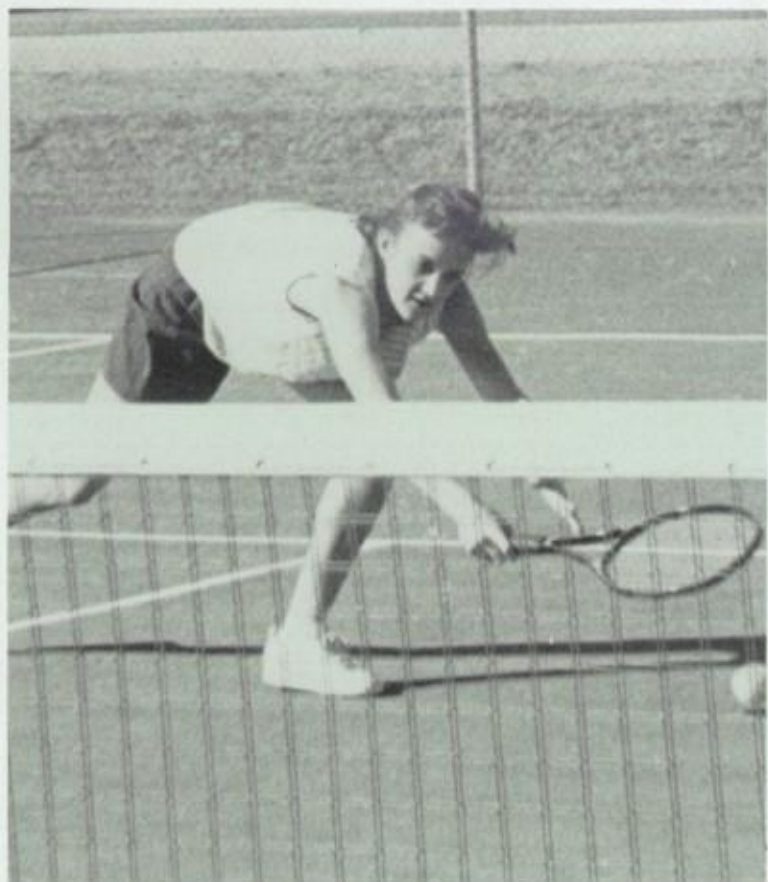

Against their opponents, the players used strength and determination as part of their defense. Healthy attitudes combined with support for each of the teammates were essential points also stressed by Coach Adams.

Individual abilities increased as did stamina and discipline which helped them throughout the season. Consistent practice and new techniques contributed to the team's success.

Tennis Anyone?

Boys tennis started off the year armed with positive attitudes and their all-important racquets. With the addition of a new coach, the team concentrated on its goals toward successes.

There were high expectations for this top-notch team, and a .500 season was right within reach. The team's top priority was improving each individual player's game, while secondary goals included placing players in regionals. Sportsmanship, strategy and playing intelligently were the things most focused on.

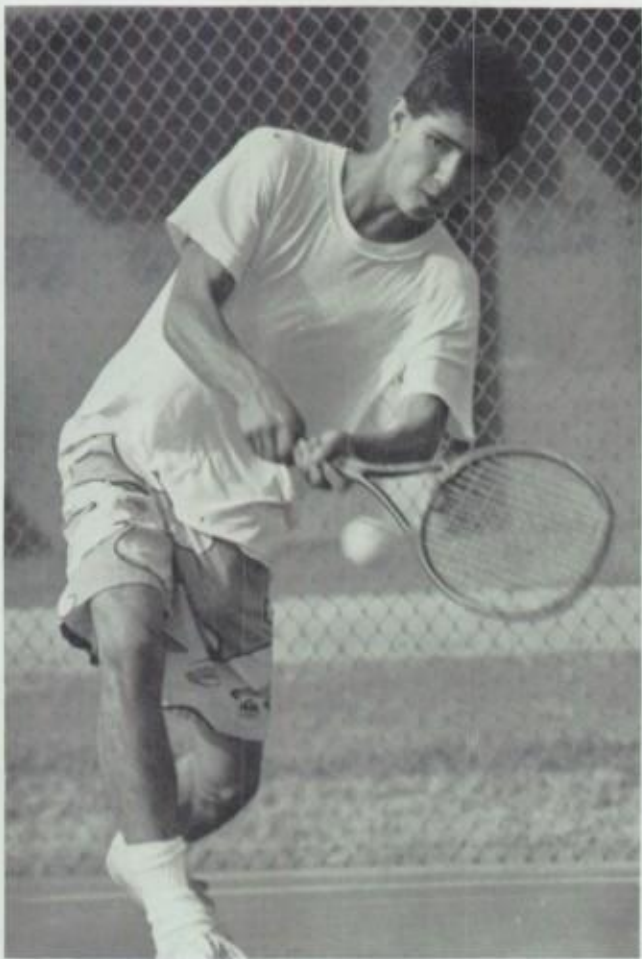

Even though he was new to the court, math teacher Coach Crabtree had a lot of confidence in his squad. "All in all, we had a really strong team," he commented.

Off The Starting Block

Trying a new angle, this year's track program received a face lift. Combining both girls and boys track encouraged better attitudes as well as strength and endurance. Although some guys felt pressured by the girls presence, Kim Becker spoke for the girls when she said, "I feel that working out with the guys really helps us to work harder. They push us to do our best."

The boys' head Coach Mr. Kappas, and the girls' head Coach Nevin, added several other coaches to the staff to provide more individualized attention for the athletes. Each coach specialized in a specific area in an attempt to make more training time available.

To emphasize school spirit, a new dress code was enforced. This consisted of only blue, grey, or white outfits for daily practice. There were some negative attitudes towards this dress code. As Mike McClure put it, "I don't like it as much as last year because we got to wear crazy shorts and be our own person." But once they were on the track, all of their grievances were left behind and forgotten. All that mattered was coming across the finish line first.

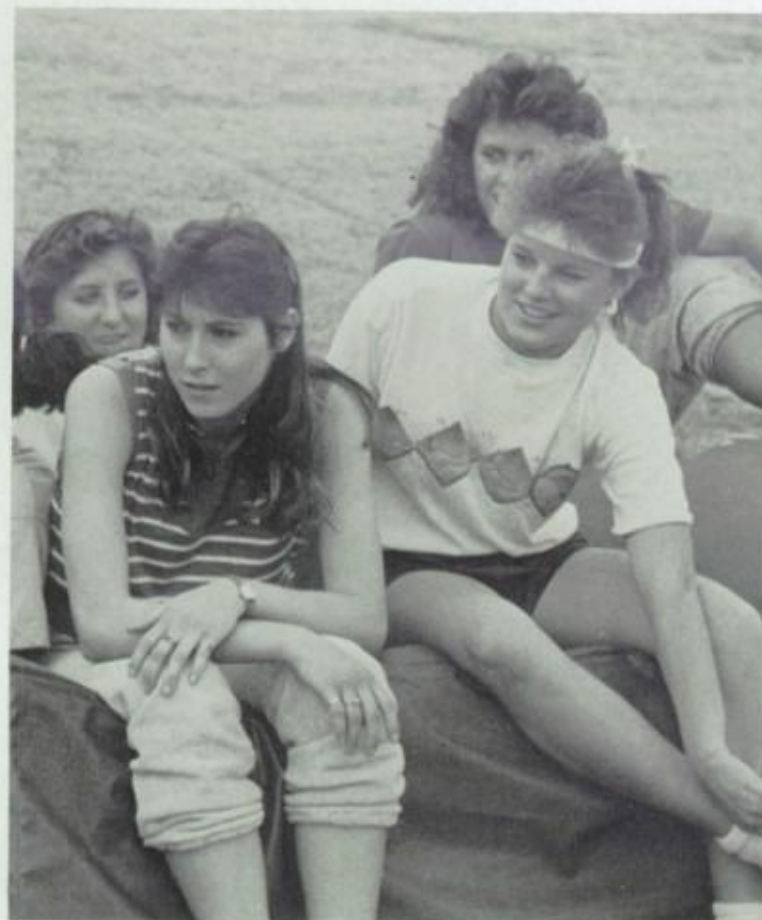

Despite the conflicts of opinion about the changes, everyone anxiously looked forward to the season as a prosperous one.

Spirit Rousers

Talent, enthusiasm, punctuality, attendance, and the ability to get along with others were far more important assets than jumping and kicking to the Mustang Cheer Squad. Ms. Colbern, cheer sponsor, emphasized this when she said, "We learn a lot about ourselves and others in cheer class. These girls are exciting to work with."

Adding to the excitement was Kathy Smith who was trained by well-known gymnast, Kurt Thomas. She became the Mustang mascot, "Spunky," adding spirit to the Mustang crowd.

Striving to be the best, the cheerleaders prepared for exciting Friday night football games. Enthusiasm was evident and the energy and encouragement contributed by the crowd surely made it worth the extra effort. Valerie Rubio, varsity captain, said, "It means so much more to be out there on the track cheering the Mustangs on to victory and knowing that the crowd is behind us one hundred percent."

Even during the summer, the cheerleaders were expected to maintain their skills by attending cheer camp. At camp in Flagstaff, they received superior plus trophies and ribbons in all areas of competition.

The cheer squad had, with little doubt, proved deserving of their title as the number one, non-coed cheer squad in the nation.

Dancing to the Rhythm

Fillies, the glamorous girls that performed at games and pep rallies weren't always glamorous. At seven a.m. they were dressed in curlers, torn sweats, old t-shirts and other clothes in their practice wardrobe prepared to dance. This unique attire helped in alleviating the hard work out into each new routine. Before giving their perfected performance, they needed to master certain routines introduced at camp.

Over the summer, they attended the National Spirit Ambassador camp in Flagstaff which lasted five days. During the week at camp, they learned new dance routines, warm-ups and won a multitude of awards. Included in these awards were the Ambassador Award which was voted on by other schools, the Individual Performance Award for best choreography and creativity in a home routine and a talent show. Overall, the girls had a great time becoming the best of friends.

Putting their camp knowledge to work, manager Carie Buske took care of the music while Margie Romero-Wolf, Fillie sponsor, and co-captains Teryl Smith and Pam Rogers made sure that everyone put in their two hours of daily work to prove that their unified goal was striving for excellence in their performances.

Trying A New Angle

in Campus Activities

Involvement was the new angle in campus activities with over one-third of the student population participating in fifty one clubs and organizations.

Sparking the interest was the diversity of the offerings. Increased membership in clubs brought about a renewed sense of belonging. This was achieved by a multitude of fundraising projects geared towards helping others in the community while having fun at the same time. Fund-raising sales included old standbys like Gummi Bears, bagels and chocolate bars. New items included pillows, foam #1 hands and Dobson Beach, Yacht and Polo Club sweatshirts. Students not involved in selling readily contributed by buying.

Encompassing all angles of campus life, fine arts students involved themselves in displaying their talents in plays, concerts and art shows.

An active student council and willing student body were all that was needed to make a campus that teemed with activity.

Close-Up, Club of the Year, Discovers Our Nation's Roots

Club of the Year and a trip to Washington D.C. were the rewards justly earned by the hard working and politically stimulated members of Close-Up.

Club members attended weekly meetings, gaining and sharing political procedural knowledge, with the ultimate goal being a week in our nation's capitol. This was achieved by actively contributing to school spirit with numerous campus fund raisers and through contributions from civic organizations.

An interview with Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor and a luncheon with Senator DeConcini were just two of the once in a lifetime experiences shared by the sponsors and a score of students. Tours of our nation's capitol and national monuments plus a dinner dance at a Washington theatre highlighted the week. Added to the opportunity to meet with lobbyists, journalists, and congressmen to discuss issues ranging from student rights to international affairs, and the final result was a power packed week.

Because of their hard work and outstanding stature, Close-Up certainly earned Club of the Year.

The Challenge

Leaders Strive For Main Goal

"Student Council is my way of representing our school the best I can." These were the words of sophomore vice-president Melenda Mossman stated when she thought about the challenge she took this year. To everyone involved in Student Council, being a student leader meant taking on new and exciting challenges. Not only were there personal challenges, but also school challenges as well.

Besides organizing the biggest challenge, Homecoming, student leaders also looked forward to participating in Open House, putting together pep rallies, assemblies, the Welcome Back dance, Westwood Weak, the Canned Food Drive, Staff Appreciation Week, MORP, and Prom all of which hopefully will become part of the Mustang tradition.

Although the leaders are constantly busy throughout the year, never were they to forget their main goals — to make the student body feel like they belonged to the Mustang family, and to always strive to get them involved. Leaders also reinforced the motto they all learned to live by — "Capturing the Challenge!"

Excellence

Accent on Academics, NHS Rise Above the Rest

Two outstanding academic groups of students who concentrated primarily on academics and leadership were Accent on Academics and National Honor Society. These two groups worked diligently at not only scholastic standings, but also devoting time and effort to their organizations.

"We are not a club — we are a team!" Mr. Cox, sponsor of Accent on Academics, said. Unlike a club, Accent on Academics did not sponsor activities or fund raisers, but rather competed against other schools at trivial knowledge. Categories included: music, math, sports, science, grammar, and history.

Another group striving for excellence was National Honor Society. Maintaining a GPA of 1.5 or better may be difficult enough for some students, but that was only one of the requirements for NHS members. The club functioned as a school and community service organization. Each of the members of NHS worked on several projects which included providing meals for Ms. Wictor, who was ill during the fall semester, awarding scholarships for members, and providing a tutoring service for students.

Along with scholastic achievement these students left with a tremendous feeling of satisfaction.

Altered States

Newsrab, Quill and Scroll And Literary Arts Change

Trying new angles was the "in" thing for campus publications as they attempted new concepts.

The most visable publication was the newspaper, The Mustang Roundup. All staff members competently served to inform the student body. They scoured the campus and community looking for vital news, fascinating features, dynamic sports, provocative opinion, and informative in-depth reports. The paper's skilled photographers and cartoonist endeavored to summarize events, adding an extra dimension to the paper.

New for The Roundup this year was a name change (adding "The" to the official title), and changing to a compact, magazine style.

Perspectus, the literary magazine, also ventured an image change shifting from a club to more of a publication. The staff's goal was to publish students' writing and artwork.

Quill and Scroll, comprised of members of yearbook, newspaper, and Perspectus, also incorporated new ideas. In addition to being an honorary society for journalists, the club also participated in service projects to benefit the community.

The hard work of all the publication staffs was evident as Dobson became a showcase for high-quality, respected works.

Experience

Making The Difference

Specializing in leadership, Future Business Leaders Of America, Distributive Education Clubs Of America, Distributive Education, and Cooperative Office Education emphasized future careers of their members.

With chapters all over the country, FBLA competed with other schools in state and national contests. Its main focus this year was to establish career goals, develop character and self-confidence, and facilitate the transition from school to work. The advisor, Mrs. Braunhut, said, "We have strived to make students more aware of careers in the business world and to focus on life after high school."

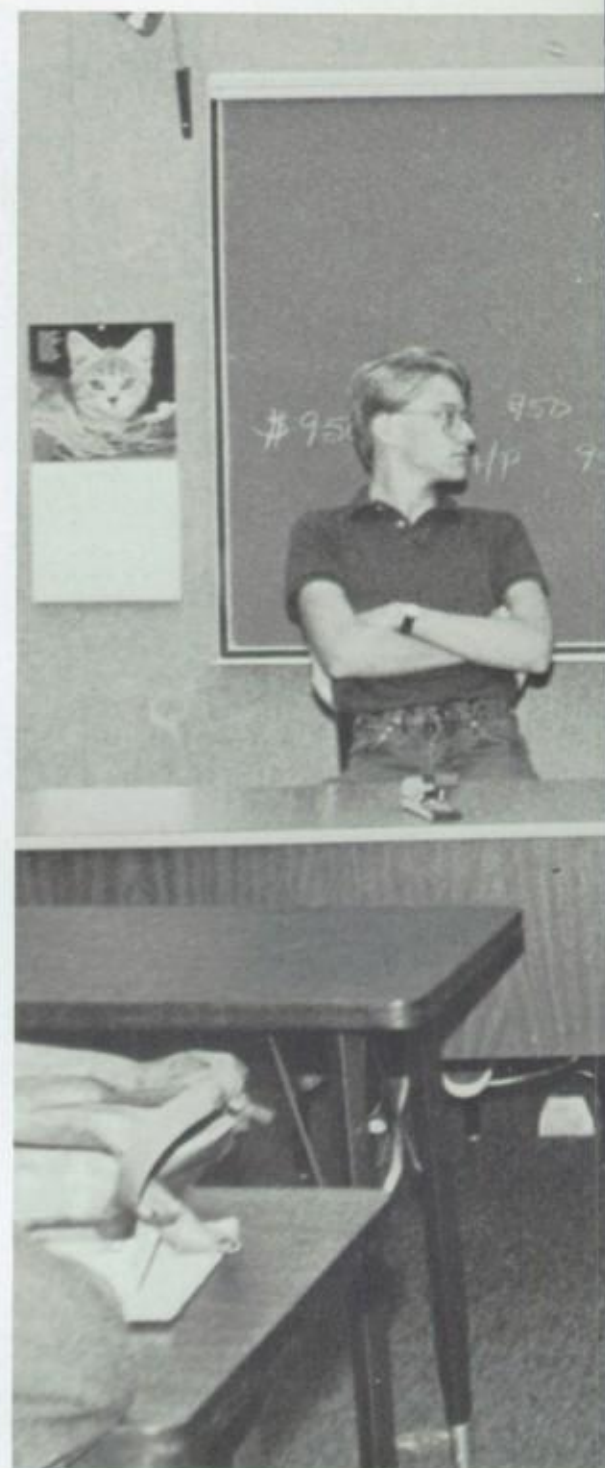

Another career oriented club was DECA which also included members of the DE class. This chartered class was open to seniors with the desire to work during school hours. Along with service activities, they attended three main conferences and competed in sales events winning trophies and scholarships. The advisor, Mrs. Berssenbruegge, felt great satisfaction with the club's progress.

Equally active was COE, a class for seniors which gave both classroom instruction and related on-the-job experiences. An average of twenty work hours a week earned them three credits. COE also contributed to Mustang spirit activities and community charities.

All these clubs prepared members for their futures in business.

Clubs with Class

VAPA, HERO, FFA Learn and Serve

The Visual Arts Promotions Association, Home Economic Related Occupations, and Future Farmers of America, more commonly known as VAPA, HERO, and FFA were three active, club related clubs on campus.

Many VAPA creations were seen not only on club t-shirts, but also on the many programs, posters and even on the school seal all of which VAPA helped to design and create. Also taken on were displays of student art works in the office and in the spring and winter art shows.

HERO members were real heros to the many charities which benefitted from their time and effort in the form of pies for Thanksgiving and money from a hike-a-thon given to Cerebral Palsey. These services were carried out even though the members held part time jobs; a mandatory requirement for HERO membership.

FFA also donated time to charities by helping with the J.C.'s haunted house. They also kept club traditions alive. A particular favorite was green hand day. Those would-be members' hands were dyed green as a form of initiation.

Although all three clubs dealt with different interests, their goals were the same — to be actively involved and, of course, to have fun along the way.

Making It Count

French/German Clubs Sacrifice Business

Parliamentary procedure and boring business meetings were two things that turned students away from clubs. In light of this, the French and German clubs took the initiative and sacrificed the business portion of the meetings so members could take part in the cultural aspects.

Each French meeting was a cultural experience. France wasn't so far away to members who sampled French cheese and listened to Scott Miller tell of his adventures there. Other activities included the play, "Cyrano de Bergerac" and a Mardi Gras celebration. A sock hop and lollipop sale funded scholarships for members going to France through NACEL, an exchange program.

Baseball along the Rhein was the reward the German club received for the hard work put into their foreign exchange program. Money from Gummi-Bear sales aided German exchange students. For three weeks students toured Arizona. Everything from camping at the Grand Canyon to learning the great American pastime, baseball was experienced. In fact, they learned so well, when juniors Wendy Woodward and Wade Zellmer went to Germany they found their friends playing baseball.

The no business more culture angle paid off as club members discovered that extra time meant extra fun.

Breaking Barriers

Latin/Spanish Clubs Gain Understanding

Breaking the language barrier, Latin club and Spanish club met at a picnic to get acquainted. For the first time, these clubs had the opportunity to learn about the country that each was studying and to exchange ideas with other students interested in foreign language. Although these clubs grew closer socially, they functioned independently.

As a member of the Junior Classical League, a national organization which promotes the culture and language of Latin and Greek, the Latin club's first goal was to raise enough money from candy sales to attend the annual J.C.L. state convention. The remaining money was used to buy games and films that made learning Latin more fun.

Spanish club concentrated its efforts on sponsoring an El Salvadoran child, Oscar Armando Velasquez, and his community through the Save the Children Organization. This aid program took the members from simply learning about Spanish countries to making an active difference. Money for this project and a Cinco de Mayo celebration was raised by two candy sales.

Each club had worked towards promoting its language and getting involved in its country's culture, but they went a step further by learning to work together.

International and Foreign Exchange Integrate

"We are the World" could have been the song for International Club and Foreign Exchange students striving to enlighten themselves about various cultures around the world.

International Club possessed fresh insight as new members contributed their original thoughts while learning about each others backgrounds. The first step in accomplishing this was a picnic at Kiwanis Park where members were able to get to know one another in a friendly environment.

Visiting from their native lands, seven Foreign Exchange students dared to experience the American way of life. Foreign Exchange students were here to learn, share, and just have fun. "I wouldn't have traded the experience for the world," summed up Henrik Holmquist.

Students discovered that as the year ended, so did the cultural barriers, leaving only memories of a great year.

Specializing in Mind and Body

Bike, Backpacking, D and D Stress Mental and Physical Bond

Have you ever hiked the Grand Canyon or ridden up South Mountain? Did your mind ever carry you on an expedition of dragons and warlords? If so, then chances were you attended the Bike, Backpacking, or Dungeons and Dragons club.

The Backpacking club members learned techniques and procedures on the trail and in camp. One of their hikes took place at the Superstition Mountains.

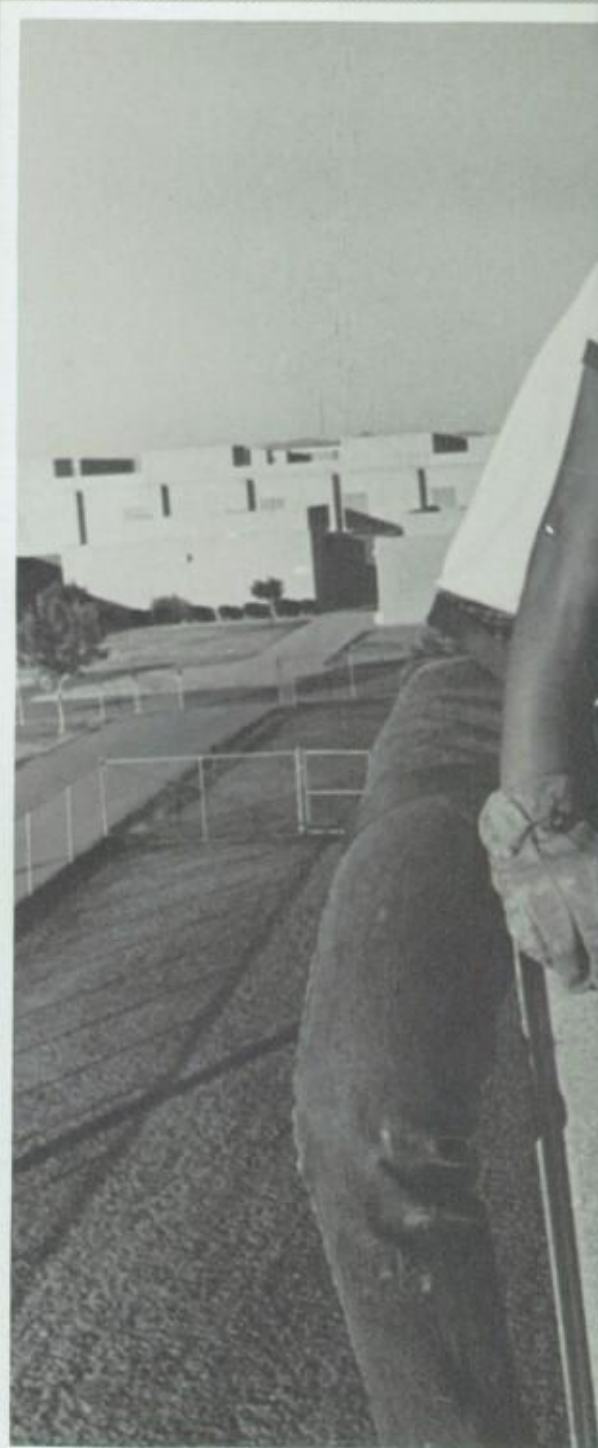

As its members were scaling mountains, bike "clubbers" were involved in weekend rides and races.

While the Bike and Backpacking clubs were busy, Dungeons and Dragons was meeting twice weekly to give students a chance to use their minds and play games at the same time.

Although these clubs provided after school fun, members found that the shared experience taught them to work together and think independently.

Past Glories, Global Affairs

Historical Society, Model U.N. Open New Horizons for Students

The Social Studies Department unveiled two new clubs this year, the Historical Society and Model United Nations. Both clubs enabled students to learn about subjects in more detail and complexity than could be taught in the classroom.

The Historical Society provided students with the opportunity to delve deeper into the cause and effect of topics ranging from presidential assassination to humor in America. Members heard presentations by professors, faculty, students, survivors of the Holocaust, and an ex-POW during the Vietnam War.

The Model U.N. gave students the chance to learn more about current events and world affairs. Members practiced parliamentary procedure, debate techniques, and the art of diplomacy. A pseudo-U.N. session was held at the U of A for Model U.N. organizations. Our chapter represented delegates from the countries of El Salvador and Rwanda.

All in all, both clubs added new perspectives to the learning of the social sciences.

Getting Involved

Service Clubs Participate Actively in the Community

In addition to the hectic schedules of high school life, students were busy working on projects and raising money, not to benefit themselves, but to benefit the community. These philanthropic students were members of the service clubs: Mayor's Youth Committee and Interact. Concerned with the needs of Mesa, these clubs took action to serve the community through volunteer work and fund raising projects.

Mayor's Youth Committee worked to become involved in Mesa's activities. The members met downtown once a month with members from other local schools to discuss community projects. The selected members were required to work on two approved projects and attend school board and city council meetings.

Interact started off the year with "Pennies for People," a class competition to raise money for U.N.I.C.E.F. and remained active in the city service projects throughout the year. Interact, an extension of the Mesa West Rotary Club, worked in conjunction with Rotary members. Summing up the spirit of the service clubs, Nancy Johnson, president of Interact stated, "It's a rewarding feeling knowing you have done something for someone else. That's what it's all about, doing something good for your fellow man."

Serving You

New Clubs Provide New Awareness

Students Against Driving Drunk and the Video Club had much in common in that they were both service clubs. Neither one raised funds to help themselves. Their main purpose was to inform the students.

S.A.D.D., which was barely off the ground last year, really picked up speed. Members participated in many activities such as making announcements at games and hanging up banners to remind students of the danger, of drinking and driving. The major goal was to inform students of the side effects of alcohol and the many consequences that must be faced if alcohol is abused. The message they tried to get across was simple but critical; if you drink, don't drive.

The Video Club was also of service to the school. Members informed students of campus happenings by taping games, spirit activities, and other school functions. Many of the videos were the finished product of dedicated Video Club members. The club's goal was not only to inform students of campus activities, but it was also to teach the use of video equipment. The skills obtained in this club provided students with expertise in the use of sophisticated equipment they wouldn't have had otherwise.

S.A.D.D. sponsor Ms. Norris and Video sponsor Mr. Browning concluded, "When it comes down to it, these clubs willingly serve Dobson."

Surpass the Competition

Speech & Debate/Chess Attain Goals

Trying new angles was just what Speech and Debate and Chess Club did to gain recognition for their achievements.

Speech and Debate had the distinction of being one of the only AIA sports on campus which continued throughout the year. Despite being a traditional debate team for only two years, the team was one of the top five in the state. The 47 member club began the year with their first shut-out victory against Xavier, capturing both first and second place. Besides the twenty-plus tournaments the teams competed in, the highlight of the season came when they travelled to Window Rock, Arizona for a Southwest regional tournament November 8, 9, and 10.

New this year was the Chess Club, established to give students the opportunity to compete using their minds instead of their bodies. Club sponsor Mr. Lutz encouraged members to study the game and its strategy through books and chess masters for an advantage over their opponents. Although they didn't enter outside tournaments, in November a 'round robin' was held within school to determine the top players. Despite the concentration and mental skill necessary for chess, Mr. Lutz emphasized that it was all "just for fun."

The new angles paid off as both clubs were able to surpass the competition.

Giving Out

Oasis and FCA Share a Part of Themselves

"Don't talk, be quiet!" These were the usual commands expressed by teachers, but in Oasis and Fellowship of Christian Athletes, members were afforded the opportunity to share their feelings about God and the part He plays in their lives.

Although separation of church and state was controversial in terms of prayer in school, Oasis and FCA managed to overcome the obstacle by meeting as clubs during lunch. The members were able to openly discuss their ideas about religion at the meeting without forcing their opinions on anyone.

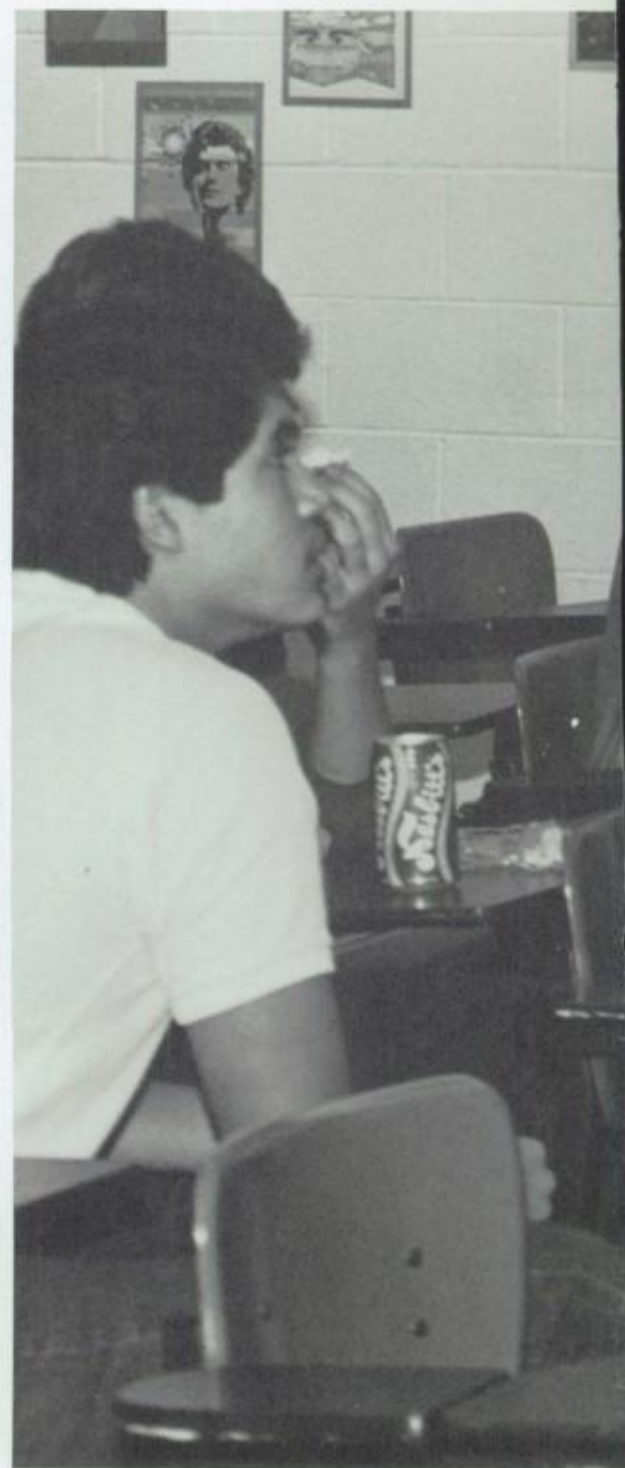

Their main purpose was to concentrate on personal growth within each of the clubs members. David Paul commented, "The joy of Oasis was sharing in God's place in each person's life."

Oasis experienced more community awareness than in past years by inviting guest speakers to the meetings. On the other hand, Fellowship of Christian Athletes provided necessities for needy families at Christmas time, and was visited by the musical group, "Undercover".

The uniqueness of these clubs came from the fact that students could feel free to talk about their beliefs and personal, spiritual experiences.

Sherlock Holmes and Science Clubs Detect and Explore New Ideas

You're walking down a dark, foggy street wondering who killed Mr. Rockefeller, a rich tycoon. You suspect it could be the maid, his nephew, or the butler, but you believe it was the nephew. Why?

This was the scene pictured in the new Sherlock Holmes Society. They took on a new case each week and attempted to solve it deductively.

Although the Science/Ecology and Sherlock Holmes clubs were worlds apart, both clubs very much enjoyed a mystery.

The Science/Ecology club studied Arizona. One of the field trips was to Saguaro National Monument and the Sonora Desert Museum where they studied the mysteries of nature. "I would like this to be a club where students can go on trips with different science teachers and get a chance to learn about different areas of science from people who specialize in those areas," commented Ms. Parr.

The Science/Ecology club was very different than the Sherlock Holmes club, but the concept was still the same. Both clubs wanted to expand their campus roles and hopefully, reach other individuals.

Simply Superior

Mustang Marching Band Works for Perfection.

The Mustang Marching Band proved once again that they were best in the state by achieving top honors at both ASU and UofA band days.

The band attended a week of band camp in Prescott which really strengthened the students' unity. Three weeks of rigorous practices were to follow. After school began, there were weeks of 6:30 A.M. practices still to come. Finally, on the third week of school, the competition began.

At ASU Band Day, Dobson was the final band to perform, right before ASU band. An outstanding performance earned them a superior honor and the Nunamaker Award, shared only with Amphitheater High of Tucson. The Nunamaker means the band received straight one grades from all of the judges. This was the second time in three years that the band had received the award.

Despite the strict discipline that the band maintained during the performances, they were just as wild and crazy as the rest of the students. This created a feeling of camaraderie on and off the field.

Pursuing Unity

Symphonic and Concert Bands Create Harmony

Unity, as English teachers often reminded students, holds a composition together. This same principle was vital in the Symphonic and Concert bands. This force formed friendships and a willingness to work together.

Because of their many hours of practice, band members learned to work as one. In addition to an hour a day in class, students practiced at home, enabling them to contribute to the entire ensemble. Thus, when they met for performances, they knew they were ready.

Band also allowed musicians to perform in special situations. The Symphonic Band had the opportunity to share their rare talents with the whole country at the Music Educators' National Convention in Pasadena, California. Both bands, in addition to many concerts, competed in local and state concert festivals. "We are not going just to get a trophy, but for the students' benefit," remarked band director, Mr. Mayne.

To members, the greatest advantage was the camaraderie. Once the bell rang, the performers were still close, sharing a common dedication to music. This attitude of togetherness unified the bands, forming a family atmosphere in and out of class. "The dedication of each person to work together as one is our strength and unity," said senior Shari Barrett.

Orchestra Creates Classical Music

While the musicians were obediently following the stream of movements from Director Brenda Mitchell's hands, they were finding themselves victims of fatigue. Attempting to learn their pieces, the symphony orchestra met first hour, each day, all year. Despite their morning weariness, the symphony orchestra achieved a superior rating at Arizona State University in the ABODA Fall Orchestra Festival. Not only did they compete in fall and spring festivals, they also performed with pride in several concerts held in the auditorium before appreciative audiences.

The symphony orchestra consisted of thirty-five members who were string players, and twenty-three members who were wind, brass, and percussion players totaling fifty-eight.

In order to be a part of the symphony orchestra, the musicians made several commitments. They had to be willing to practice on their own, attend sectionals before and after school, participate in festivals on Saturdays, and perform in evening concerts.

Because the musicians persevered, they achieved their goal of being the best they could be both individually and as an orchestra.

Chorale and DaCapo Harmonize

As the choir doors opened, a harmonious melody lingered in the air, and a sense of unity could be felt. Choir was not just a time for rehearsal but was also a time for relationships.

These relationships were strengthened by long, hard hours of daily practice. Nick Thomas, senior, commented on the rigors of rehearsals. "Satisfaction never comes from rehearsal, but from the effect that the final performance leaves on the audience."

Although there was unity, each choir also had its own individual style allowing its excellence to burst forth.

DaCapo, the highest choir, dazzled audiences with its ability to focus on jazz. These pieces were performed for the school and an NAU Invitational.

Concert Choir, Les Chanteuses, and Showstoppers Prepare for Production

This large mixed ensemble dealt with serious choral literature, separating them from the other choirs.

An all female choir, Showstoppers, was the second addition to the choir department. Jazz, pop, and festival style literature gratified its members' desire to exhibit their talent.

Rounding out the department were Concert Choir and Les Chanteuses. Both performed a broad range of pieces including pop, folk, and some serious literature.

The night of the performances was often hectic, as five choirs warmed up in the same cramped room. However, enthusiasm, as well as nervousness was not dampened. As the performances ended, unity was felt by the members of the choirs.

Extra! Extra!

Time and Dedication Prove #1 Performances

"Break a leg!" wished one performer to another as the Drama Club and Dance Company prepared to entertain their audiences while expanding their talents.

The 31 members of DDC made up an extremely talented and vivacious group that practiced daily during 2nd hour with sponsor Margie Romero-Wolf. President Kim Holland and Vice President Kim Burns led the daily exercises in preparation for the Winter Concert, Dec. 11 & 13 and the Spring Concert, Mar. 13 & 14. Kim Holland stated, "To us, the concerts turn out to be a two week performance, rather than a two night show."

Like DDC, the Drama Club consisted of many gifted and enterprising people who strove to get the students involved in theatrical productions, plays, musicals and student directed one acts. Through many years of hard work, the Drama club maintained its outstanding reputation as pre-professional actors and actresses. "Drama gives me the opportunity to broaden my horizons towards acting," reflected Nicole Angeliri.

The results of these clubs' endless efforts and extra hours, was evident with the success of each performance they gave.

A New Angle*

with People

185 days, 1,110 hours, and 22,200 minutes to go — thus started the countdown for the 1985-1986 school year. New faces mingled with old, giving teachers and students alike a fresh chance at developing the new angles brought on by a new year.

The newest angle was a school without a freshman class. The freshmen had been temporarily housed at Dobson awaiting the completion of the new Hendricks Jr. High School. The drop in numbers brought new found freedom in the hallways, in the classrooms, and in the parking lots.

Seniors had the distinction of being the first four-year class to graduate. Many friendships born as freshmen grew into solid relationships, forming the traditions of a new school.

Learning by example, juniors became a support group in anticipation of the roles they would play as future leaders.

Not to be forgotten, sophomores added the "Freshness" that came with inexperience and the desire to actively contribute.

Too soon time passed, but not before the student body felt the pride which accompanies a year well done.

The school board and superintendency had the immense task of setting and carrying out district policy for 50,000 students, a number expected to double by the year 2000. To accommodate the growth, Red Mountain High School and Shepard Jr. High School were planned to open within two years.

Salt River Vista, an alternative school, was to be opened on the Salt River Indian Reservation, giving students extra chances and choices for education.

While the elected board members made policy and financial decisions, the superintendency designed the curriculum for all grade levels. As the State Department of Education raised requirements for graduation, new classes were formed to give students more opportunity in fulfilling requirements. Classes weren't made less challenging; more alternatives were offered. "We want people to get a 'valid' diploma; one backed by rigorous requirements and high standards," said Associate Superintendent, Dave Eagleburger.

Careful planning of a curriculum and policy that attended to students' needs gave the high schools the pride in knowing that there was "no other school district in the nation that has as many nationally recognized secondary schools as Mesa."

Secrets of the Forbidden Zone

"Well, I've heard loud music coming from that general direction, and loud conversation occasionally drifts from that mysterious room where teachers enter, but don't necessarily come out," whispered junior Greg James as he crept by the forbidden zone.

The truth behind what goes on behind the closed doors of the teacher's lounge was left up to student's imagination. Junior Marla Kemp believed, "The teachers go into the lounge, scream, and pray to the teacher spirit for control." Junior Angel Jannasch said the teachers spent lunch by, "Sitting in a giant circle with a huge bonfire in the middle of the room, roasting hotdogs, and singing old Beach Boys songs."

It's time the truth was out about the teacher's lounge. After all, inquiring minds want to know — we want to know.

Help Needed Is Available

Did you ever need an excuse to go home and watch your favorite soap opera during school hours? Ms. Hopfer from the nurses office would have been a good start towards home. Ever wonder if you had the opportunity to star in a soap opera? Career specialist, Mrs. Wilson, would have been the one to confide in. When help was to be found involving health or careers, both Ms. Hopfer and Mrs. Wilson were on hand to assist students in need.

Health specialist, Ms. Hopfer, worked as a nurse for seven years. Her job included emergency first aid, health screenings and referrals, Immunization review, health teaching, counseling, faculty inservices, and other minor details. "I really enjoyed the age group I dealt with. I enjoyed the students and faculty and I was never bored with this position. It was really surprising how many amazing injuries occurred," Ms. Hopfer commented. Ms. Hopfer worked as a psychiatric nurse during the summer.

Career specialist, Mrs. Wilson, has been working in the career center since January, 1978. Starting at Rhodes Jr. High, she moved to Dobson when it first opened.

There were many responsibilities involved in Mrs. Wilson's job. She provided career resources and services, provided programs and she assisted teachers. "I liked the student contact and all of the contacts I made from the community," Mrs. Wilson said.

Both Ms. Hopfer from the nurses office and Mrs. Wilson from the career center provided help to the students in need. They were always there to make life a little easier.

Career specialist, Mrs. Wilson, tries to catch up on her paperwork during the little free time available to her.

Teachers? People?

On campus, teachers may have seemed like unfeeling, heartless robots programmed to work, work, work, but once out of the classroom and off school grounds they became people too. Teachers, like their students, also liked to have fun.

Popular weekend activities ranged from ASU football games, to the shopping malls, to their own backyard gardens. Dinner and the movies were also very common. Others had jobs on the side such as teaching classes at Mesa Community College, working part-time in restaurants, and last but not least, playing the roles of mothers and fathers.

So, when students saw their teachers out in public, they shouldn't have acted so surprised. Their lives didn't stop at three o'clock!

Floating downstream, Mr. Wiley takes a relaxing trip away from the frustrations of school.

Watching You Watching Me

Traditionally school was a time away from parents, and the only exposure parents received was from conferences, Booster Club meetings, and dinner table talk. But, for several parents on campus this was not so — mainly because they were also teachers.

However, among the many apparent disadvantages some benefits were evident. Counselors appointments and schedule changes are made quickly and easily, and papers needing last minute parental signatures were just a few enjoyed by an elite group of students whose parents were also members of the staff. Watching each other were: Mr. Merlene, Greg and Laurie; Mrs. Atchinson, and Donna; Mr. Vasquez and Mario; and Mr. Sebring, and Sarah.

Taking advantage of her daughter's availability, Mrs. Atchinson borrows lunch money from Donna.

Senior Spirit '86

Being a four year high school graduate may not be a "big deal" to many but to the class of '86 it was. For three years Dobson housed four classes and was the only high school in Mesa that ever had.

Because of this, seniors had a head start on "doing" Dobson proud.

Class officers made the year memorable in many ways. The most popular accomplishments were the senior trips to Guymas, Mexico and Anaheim, California. They also designed graduation invitations and selected the senior gift.

Being a community minded trio, the officers also organized a blood drive. Students and staff participated and left the school population with a feeling of having done a good thing for others.

Senior spirit was a familiar battle cry and spurred the rest of the student body to equal the enthusiasm of the Class of '86.

When they took the PSAT in October of 1984, they never figured they would be in the top 15,000 test takers. Yet Jeff Henning, Melissa Menten, and Sandra Penry found themselves in the elite group of National Merit Scholars.

After a grueling selection process, including a recommendation by Principal

Walsh and involvement in school and community activities, the semi-finalists were picked from numerous juniors across the nation who took part in the test. Being in the top 5% of the United States academically opened doors to the future.

Junior Olympian

With five years experience and 171 wins under his belt, seasoned wrestler Rick James has been a valuable asset to the team.

Besides having wrestled against foreign teams, including New Zealand, Rick had the distinction of being the only Dobson wrestler who travelled to Hawaii to compete against wrestlers from across the United States. There he won four out of five matches. His champion qualities shone through when he competed this past year at the Junior Olympics in Las Vegas, placing third in the freestyle division.

With his winning record, which included only 27 losses and three ties in over 200 matches wrestled, Rick set an example to be emulated by the team.

Ready to grapple, senior Rick James psyches out his opponent.

Warning: Danger!

There was a serious epidemic found mostly among seniors this year, but a few juniors reported the symptoms, also. This disease struck different people in different ways, but most seniors complained of daydreaming in class, avoiding homework, and being both restless and exhausted from the many activities they were involved in.

Graduitis Nervosa Complex, otherwise known as Senioritis, was connected with a combination of wanting to graduate and a fear of being out on one's own. So far, Senioritis has not been linked to cancer, but the Surgeon General has determined that being a senior could be hazardous to your health. To date, no fatalities have been reported.

Boys' State Delegates.

Delegates Jeff Henning, Steve Chang, Carson Greer, and Darren Somo.

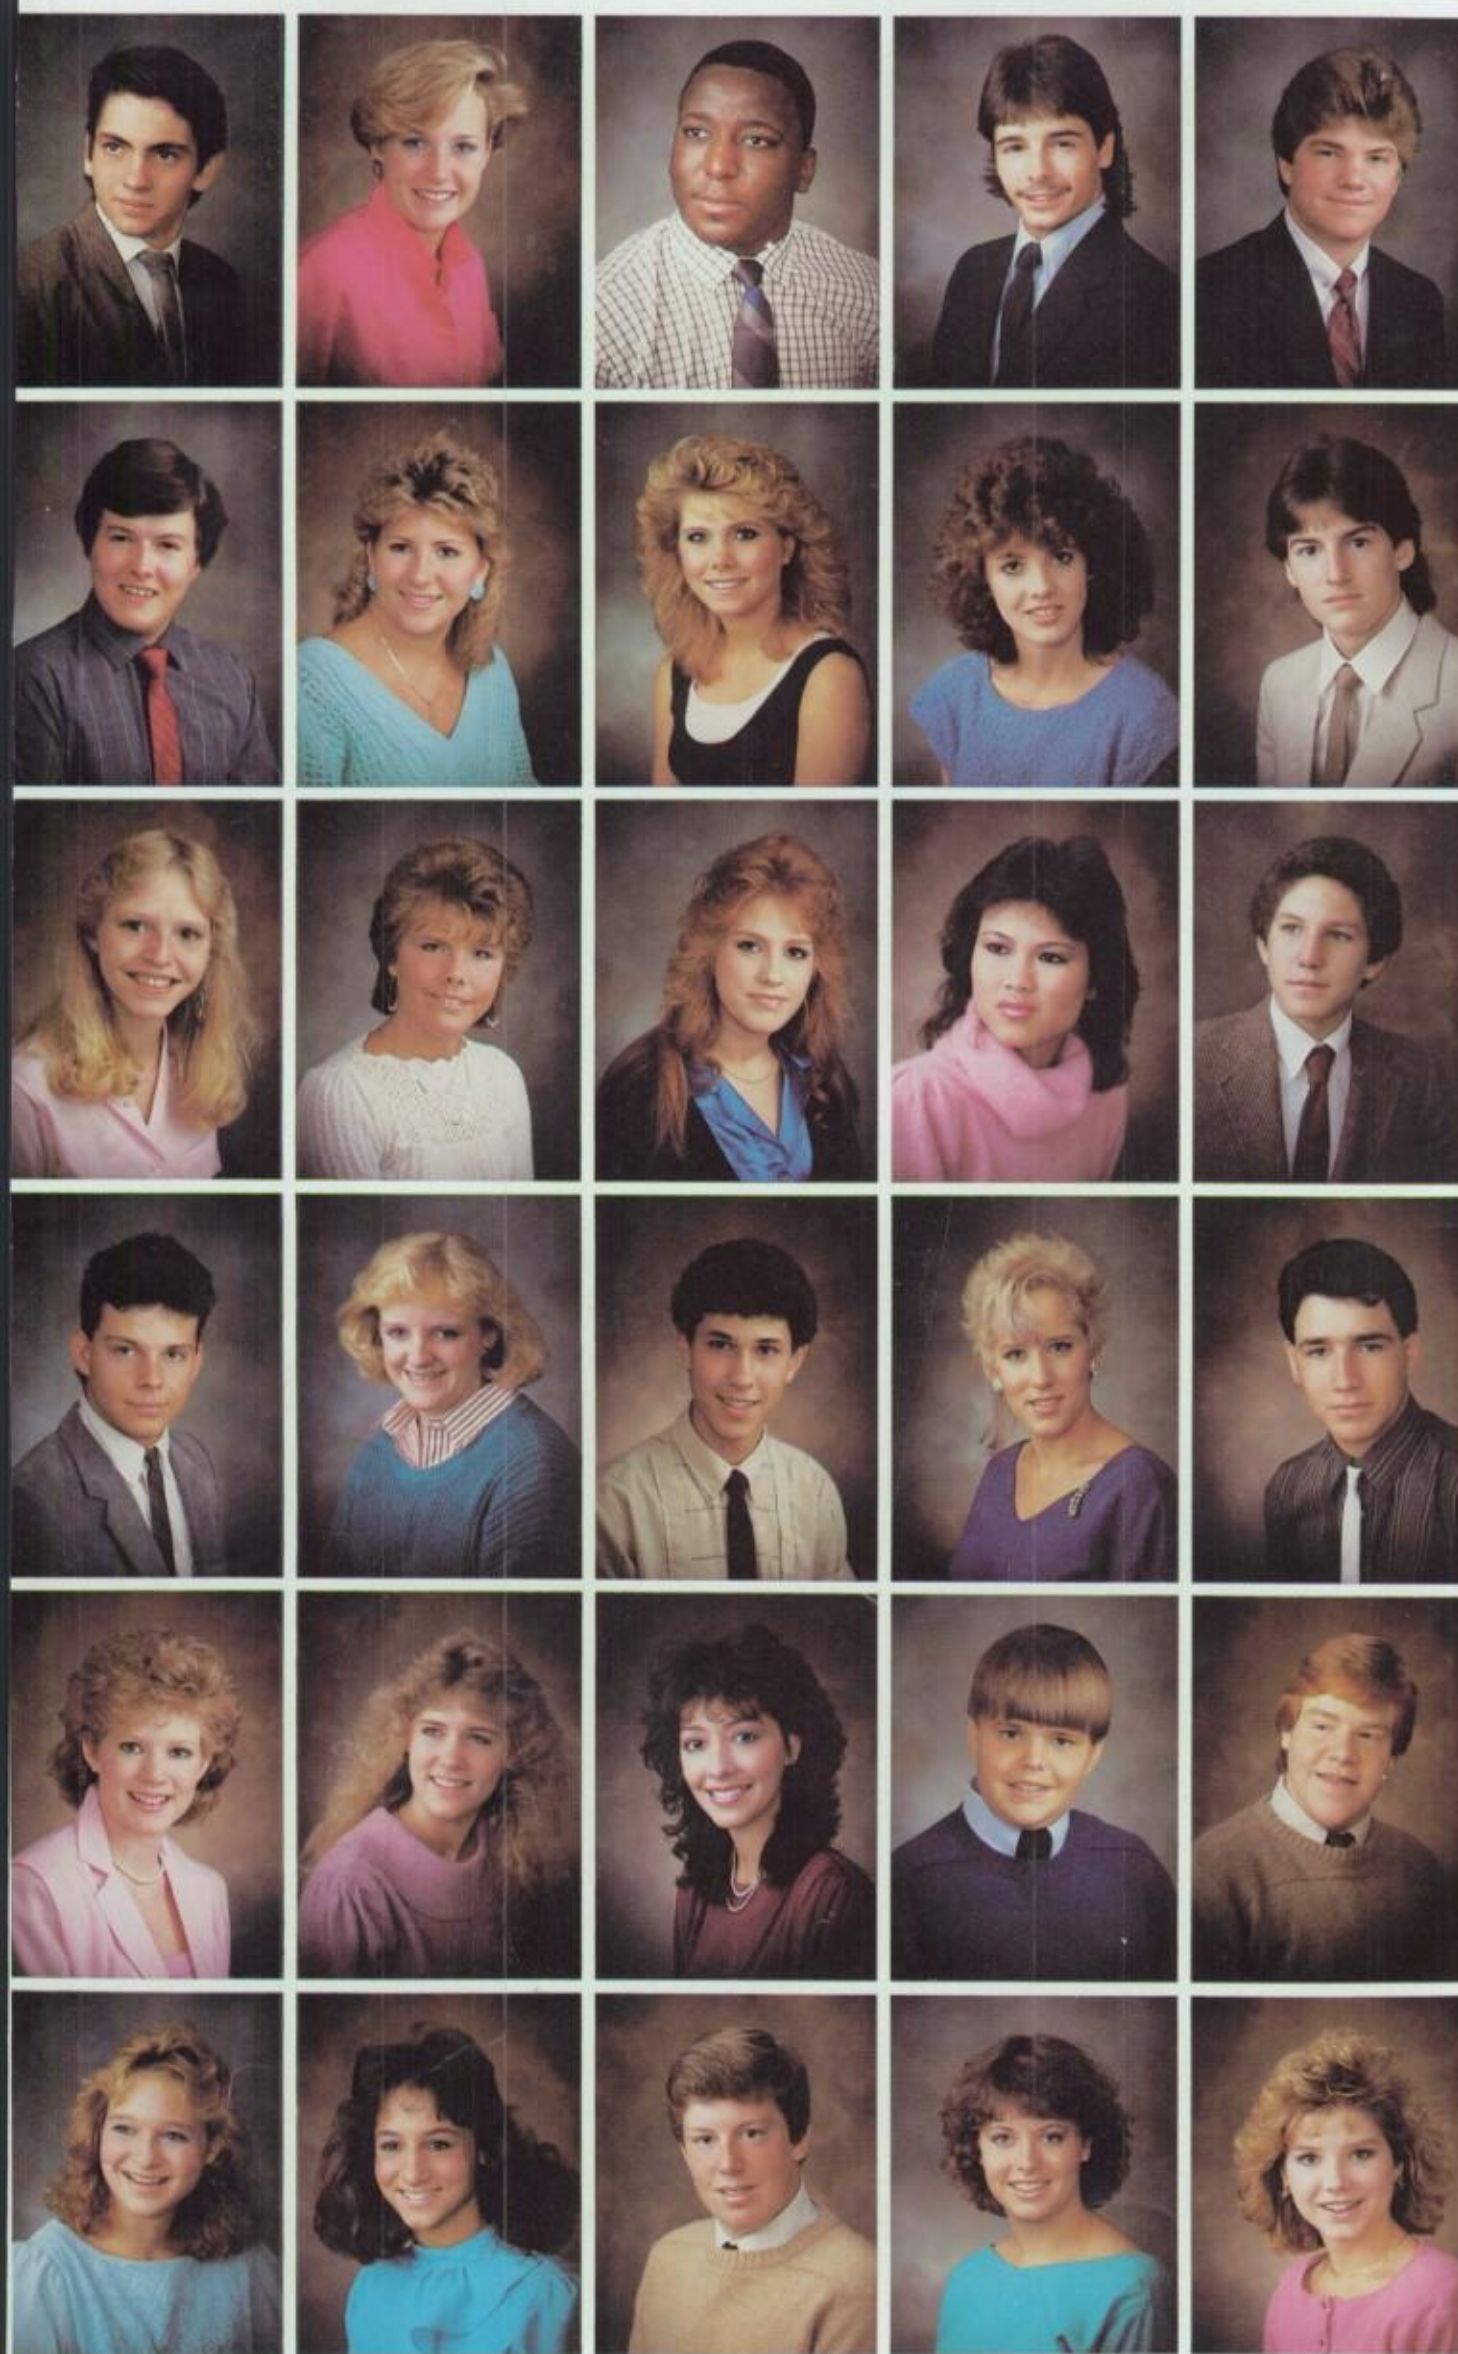

Cool summer breezes and tall evergreens were the perfect backdrop for an action-filled week of learning about, and participating in, the governmental process.

Seniors Steve Chang, Darren Somo, Jeff Henning and Carson Greer learned about the governmental process by participating in Boys' State, a forum employed to educate students about leadership and government.

The dormitories of NAU were transformed into imaginary cities. The delegates elected their own state, county, and city officials, and set up legislative assemblies.

"Boys' State was an unforgettable experience. I gained knowledge, and leadership skills," said senior Steve Chang.

Girls' State Delegates

As they packed their bags and loaded the bus for Tucson, many unfamiliar faces looked on as the summer was about to begin with the Girls' State experience. For Valerie Rubio, Brandi Martinez, and Teryl Smith, Girls' State was a valuable camp never to be forgotten.

Girls' State not only taught girl representatives around the state about how government is operated on city, county, state and federal levels, but also valuable lessons about life most attendants would cherish forever. Teryl Smith stated, "I met some of the neatest girls I've ever had the opportunity to meet this last summer. I'll never forget the friendships I made, and I owe it all to Girls' State."

A "Capitol" Experience

Washington, D.C. — where powerful bigwigs make the policies that set the course of the globe.

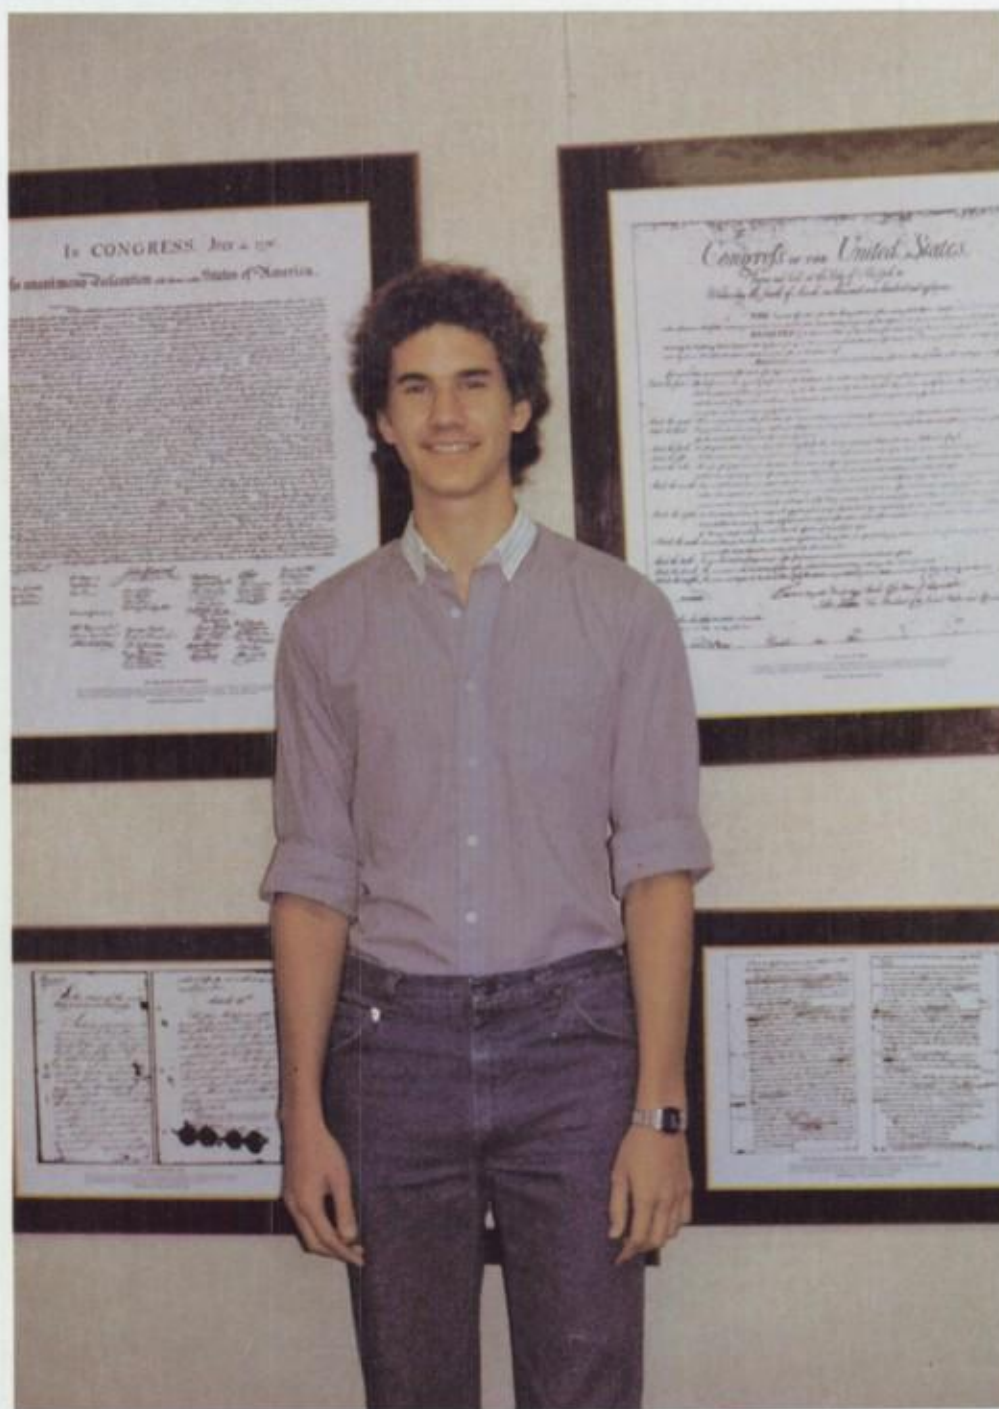

Senior Keith Pinckard received a glimpse into that world of high-pressure politics when he visited the capital during the year.

Keith captured two trips to Washington by winning first place in an essay contest entitled, "The Value of the Constitution and the Checks and Balances System."

In September, he spoke before a Senate subcommittee about his paper; and he had the option of returning in February to attend a model Constitutional convention.

"The experience was just incredible," said Keith, who was also president of the German club and a National Honor Society member.

The Bill of Rights and the Constitution provide a fitting backdrop for essay winner Keith Pinckard, senior.

Alex Bell Watch Out!

While most students only dreamed of inventing, Andrew Smith was turning his idea into reality.

This device, the Photo Meter, was used to measure the speed of objects that passed through one or more beams of light. It had the ability to count speeds from .001 seconds to 99.999 seconds and could detect as many as 20,000 objects per second. "These functions aided in the study of Kinematics in physics", said Andrew.

Andrew undertook this two month long project for the physics department, which had the need for a modified version of its old machine. When asked if he had plans for patenting the device Andrew replied, "I'm considering it, but not everyone wants a piece of crude equipment."

Mad scientist, Andrew Smith, readies his invention for a demonstration.

Leadership For Tomorrow

The Junior Statesman program at Georgetown University provided Lisa Covey and Brandi Martinez a unique opportunity.

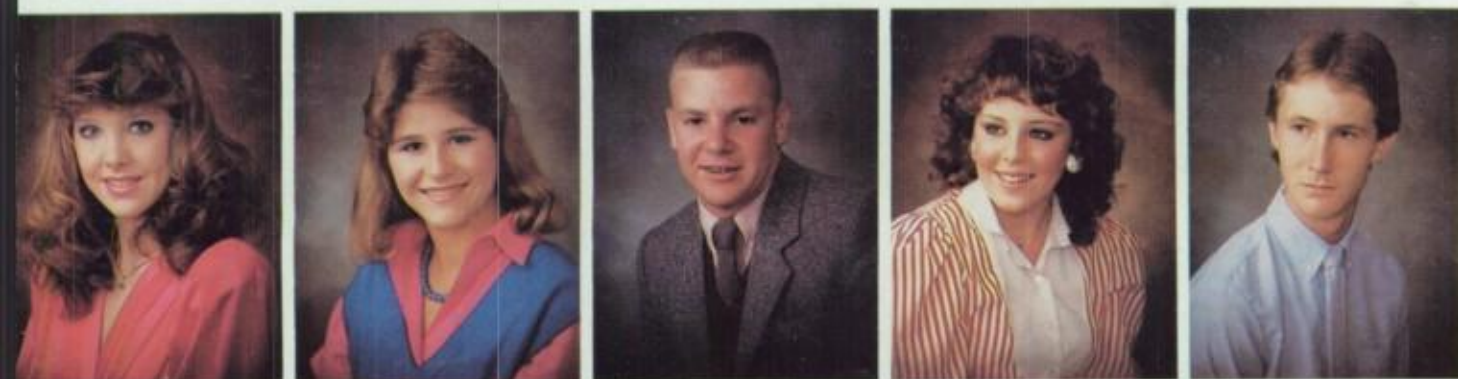

After filling out essay applications, the two seniors were chosen to attend the three week program.

"Our experience spurred interest in political science and government," commented Brandi Martinez.

Brandi and Lisa took a class for college credit and participated in formal debates on current political issues. Government officials, most notably Vice President George Bush, were among many of the speakers present. Although very busy, Brandi and Lisa had time to visit the many monuments in the area and got to know some of the 118 students who accompanied them.

Shared experiences of Georgetown give Lisa Covey and Brandi Martinez a special bond of friendship.

University Blues

The "University Blues" were sung by many collegebound students. The decision of whether to attend in-state colleges, such as MCC, ASU, U of A, and NAU, or to attend out-of-state schools was usually a financial consideration.

Preparation began during sophomore and junior years and became increasingly difficult by the senior year. Brochures and letters from colleges across the nation filled students' mailboxes, making never before considered options available.

Even entire class periods were devoted to sessions in the career center on choosing a college and applying for scholarships. With the advice of parents, counselors, and individual research, the big decision was finally made. Seniors were ready to go off to college and back to being "just a freshman".

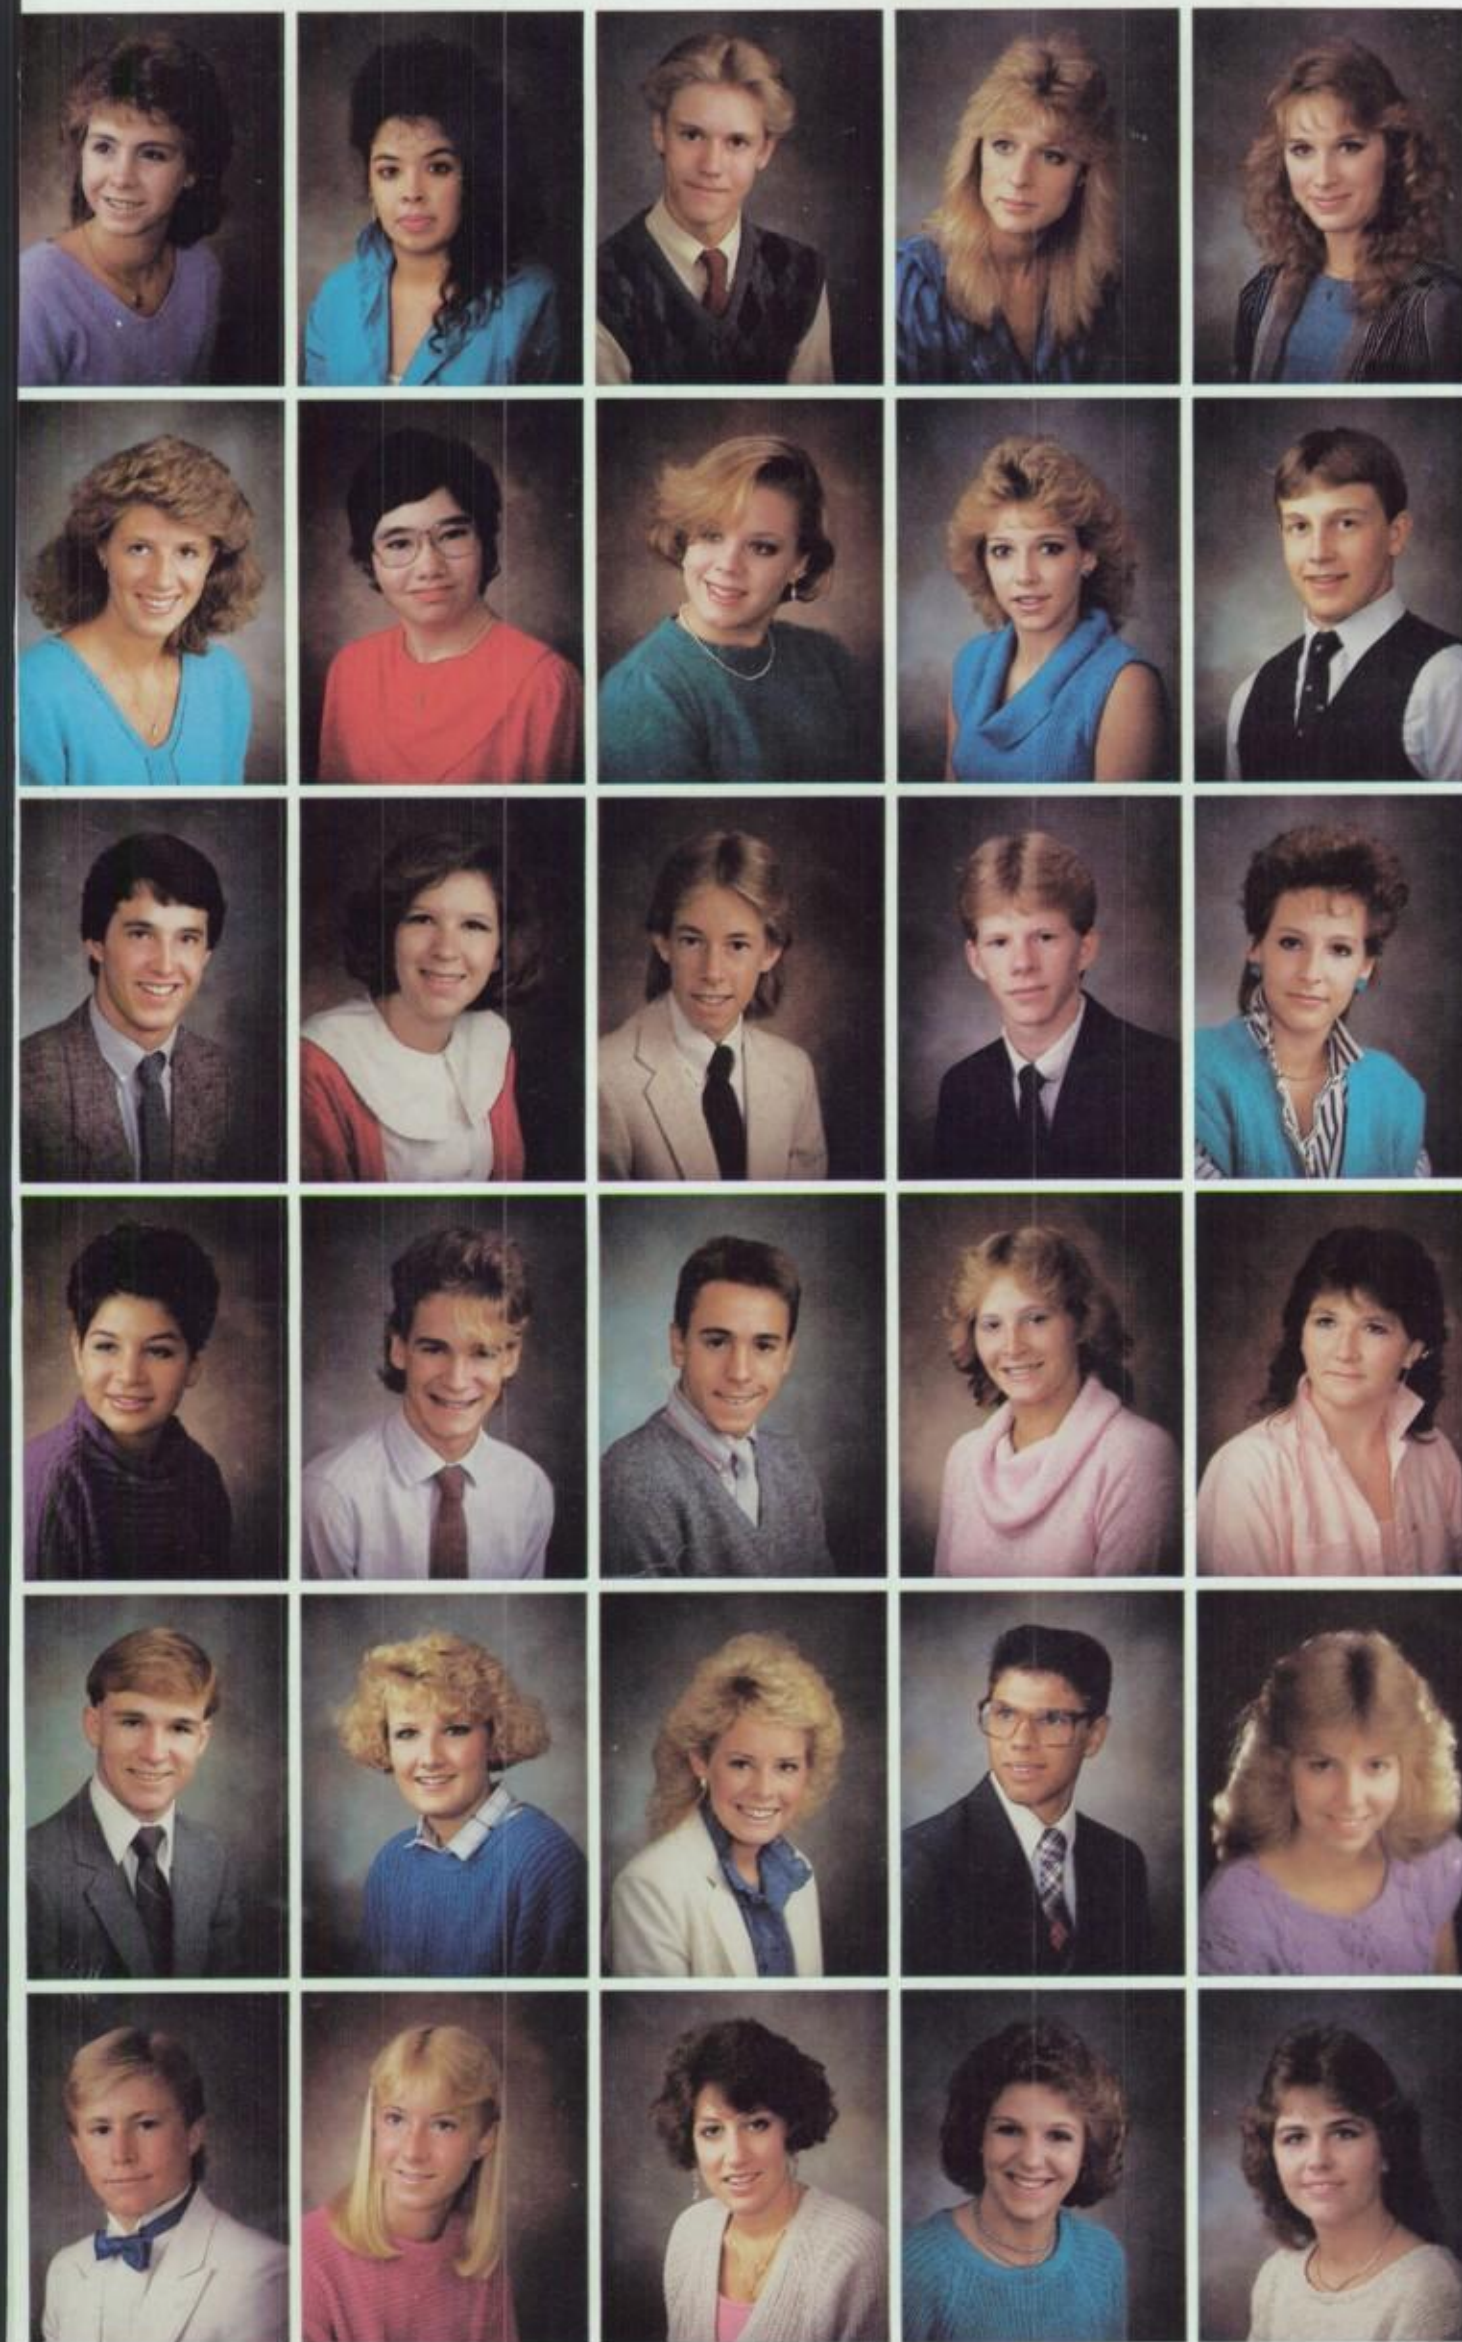

Mulling over college catalogs, seniors Andrea Bones and Harriet Heraty consider Miami University.

A "Model" Student

Imagine yourself as a trendsetter, a person who wears the latest fashions getting glances as you walk down the street. People worldwide take notice of your stylish appearance and try to imitate the look that you have created. As you jet off to a foreign land, you prepare to be photographed for catalogues and magazine covers. No, this is not a dream but the story of Heather Oddonetto, a universal model.

Heather traveled to Japan during the summer, representing Plaza 3. There she survived on her own, maintaining an apartment and receiving an allowance of $80 a week.

Heather expressed, "living in Japan was exciting and I wish to pursue modeling as far as it can take me, but it plays only a secondary role to furthering my education."

"I feel better prepared for college now that I've experienced life on my own in a foreign country," commented Heather.

Senior Spunk

Tradition was the tradition among seniors this year as they laid the foundations for the annual events and activities that would distinguish Dobson from other high schools.

One trait distinguishing the 1985-'86 seniors was the fact that they were the first four year class to pass through the halls. In addition, seniors exemplified the tremendous school spirit that rocked the campus, participating in student council events and capturing several class competition awards. The varsity football team, comprised mainly of seniors, got off to a spectacular start, after a poor season had been forecast. Consequently, senior excitement and enthusiasm ran rampant at the more frequent pep assemblies.

Because they spent so much time molding the school's reputation, the senior class was responsible for many traditions.

Proudly displaying their blue and gray, members of the varsity football team revel in school spirit.

Bosom Buddies

You can't do without them, you'd die for them, and they seem to always be there. Whether it's a shoulder to cry on, or a shoulder to punch, best friends was what the Mustang family was all about.

Whether they came in sets of two or three, male or female, best buddies were a support network through the good times and the bad. Making high school memories crazy and wild was easy to do as best friends. Bosom buddies at times were closer to each other than to their own families, and found it easier to discuss and relate to personal experiences they trusted only with each other. David Valenzuela, senior, reinforced this when he said, "Being best friends with Johnny (Cruz) was like having a brother I could really relate to."

Having the distinction of being good buddies during high school, these friends look forward to the end of the year with a bit of nostalgia.

An Olympic Dream

Jennifer Brinkman has been taking her favorite sport seriously for half of her life. When most of her friends were asleep, Jennifer was out at 6:00 a.m. training for more advanced Dressage tests. Jennifer competed in an Equestrian sport called Dressage, from a French word meaning schooling or training of the horse.

The summer of 1985 will be remembered by Jennifer for that was when she found her 8 year old Danish warmblood named Coda. Coda and Jennifer made up the youngest combination of rider and horse at the American Continental Young Riders Championship in Wadsworth, Ill. They racked up an incredible 1,134 out of 2,050 points on their first ride.

Hopefully we can say we knew Jennifer when we see her at the Olympics.

Spirit Plus

Valerie Ann Rubio has been actively involved in school and community projects ever since her freshman year. This outgoing senior was Homecoming Queen, a four year cheerleader, varsity cheer captain, in student council for three years, and on the honor roll since seventh grade. In addition, she was a member of fourteen prestigious clubs on campus. Although her hectic schedule kept her very busy, Valerie was always a sweet and caring person, one who everyone respected and looked up to. As Valerie stated, "I don't regret one active moment of my high school years, because I will always be recap-turing the memories."

"Being involved in school wasn't my main goal. I wanted to have a sense of belonging, and I wanted to help other people feel the same way," commented Valerie.

$ BIG $ BUCKS

The amount was mind-boggling. $1300 was the price paid for being a 1986 graduate. How could one senior spend so much money? Easily.

Even though not officially seniors, the class of '86 paid for the privilege in the summer of '85. The expenses of senior portraits and registration fees was around $180.

The expense of being a senior rose as the year passed. Since it's more important to look good than to feel good, $300 was spent on appearance and $200 to show it off. Most seniors ate off campus and drove bringing the amount spent on gas and food to $600.

On graduation night the class of '86 in $13 rented caps and gowns accepted their diplomas with a sigh of relief that their most expensive year of high school was over.

"Is it worth the cost?" sighs senior Kim Wilson while surveying the items necessary for an enjoyable senior year.

The Antidote

Cool tropical breezes floated through the tall, majestic palm trees, laden with coconuts. Turquoise waves quietly licked the white sandy shore as snowy seagulls soared lazily above. Pleasure-seeking students frolicked happily; some taking advantage of the beautiful ocean for snorkeling, wind-surfing and water skiing. Land lubbers, preferring solid earth, picnicked, rode horses, camped or exercised.

The seniors' "antidote for civilization" was Club Med in Guaymus, Mexico. A vote taken on October third proved that the Magic Kingdom had lost its enchantment, and something new was needed.

Sights were set on the pueblo-style village located on the Sea of Cortez. For $489, seniors could have the trip of their dreams.

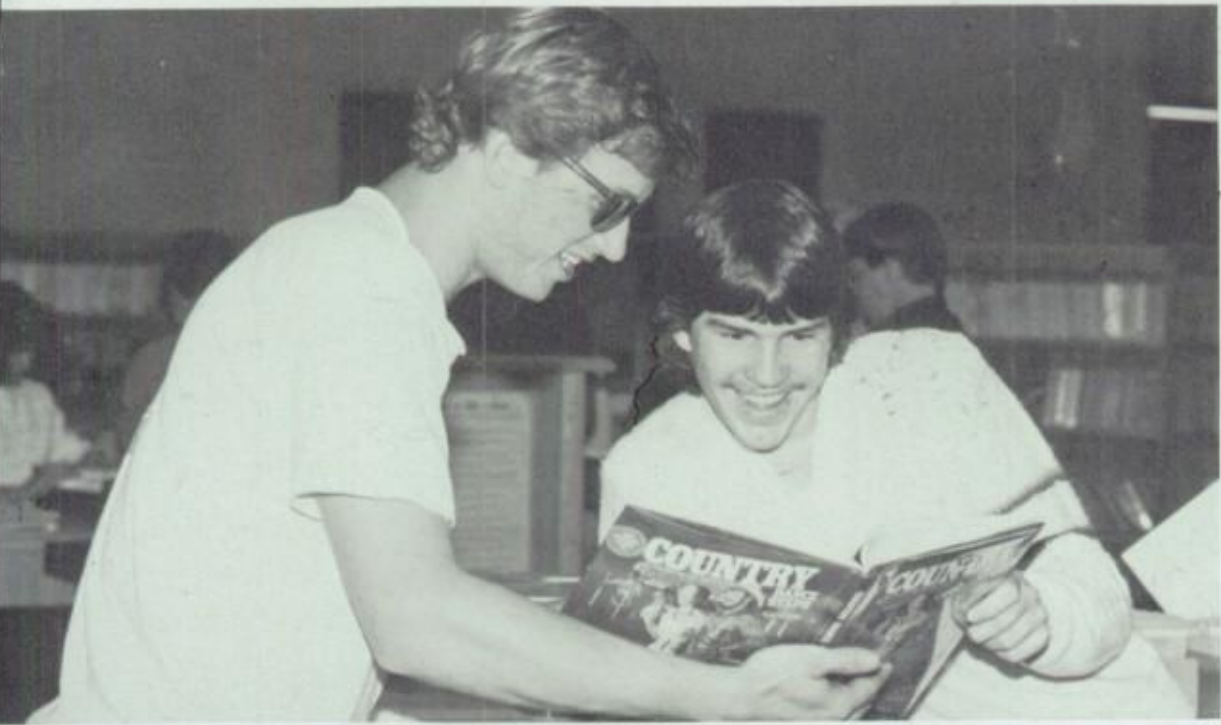

Eager with anticipation, these seniors show their enthusiasm for the senior trip to Mexico.

Class of '87 is "Rising to the Top"

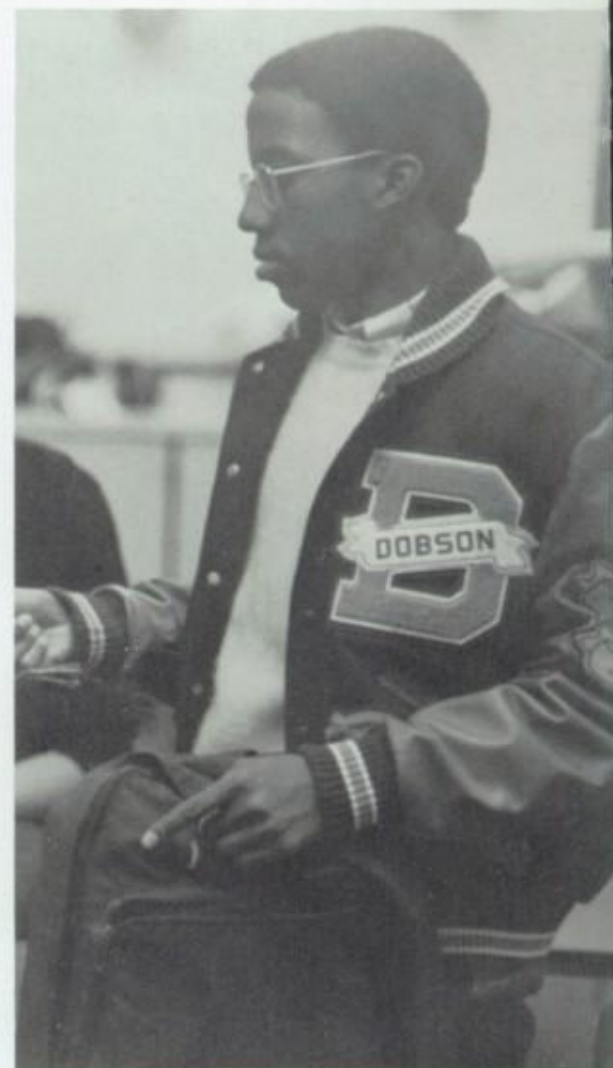

"Rising to the top," the motto for the class of '87, served as a constant reminder to the junior class officers that there was always more work to be done. The junior class officers for the 1985-1986 school year were president Gregory James, vice-president Alexander Matthews, and secretary Tracey Bridge, all bringing fresh, creative ideas to student government.

The ambitious trio served their class well by always promoting and displaying good attitudes and school spirit. Constantly working with team unity, they set a fine example for their class. They revised activities with all students in mind, and planned MORP and PROM early which displayed a continued excellence in organization and camaraderie.

Their fine attitudes and hard work paid off by establishing new traditions, setting higher standards and serving the entire student body effectively.

Cyclist Races Towards Future

The quest to succeed competitively required persistence and high goals. Greg Fresquez made this pledge to cycling, as one of the top ten junior road racers in the nation. Racing for a Tucson-based team, Greg spent almost every weekend training in Tucson. Competing also caused him to be away from home for most of the summer and many holidays. But Greg realized "it's worth it. I wouldn't do it if it wasn't." Greg raced across the state and nation winning many awards, and even visited the Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs twice. In the distant future, he dreams of National Championships and the Olympics. Greg dedicated time to cycling, knowing it would pay off.

ROTC Not Just Another Costume

At first glance one might have thought that the B building was being used as American headquarters for WWII with guys in full army regalia parading around campus. But in reality, it was just another dress up day for the Dobson JROTC members. The purpose for being in JROTC was to prepare students for leadership opportunities as future officers in the army. The experience in JROTC was enhanced for the members by a trip to Fort Huachuca. The trip not only gave them firsthand knowledge about the workings of an army base, but it also taught them how to use rifles.

Even though it was not mandatory to continue with the program after graduation, many dedicated JROTC members did.

Beyond Backseat Driving

Attaining a driver's license signaled the end to many students' careers in "backseat driving." Now they were actually behind the wheel and in control.

The possession of a license enabled students to be free from the restrictions of "Mom's Taxi Service." It gave them the freedom to get out more and be on their own.

Grueling tests of the mind, memory and reflexes were required in the process of obtaining a license. There were also the months of practice while the student only had a permit.

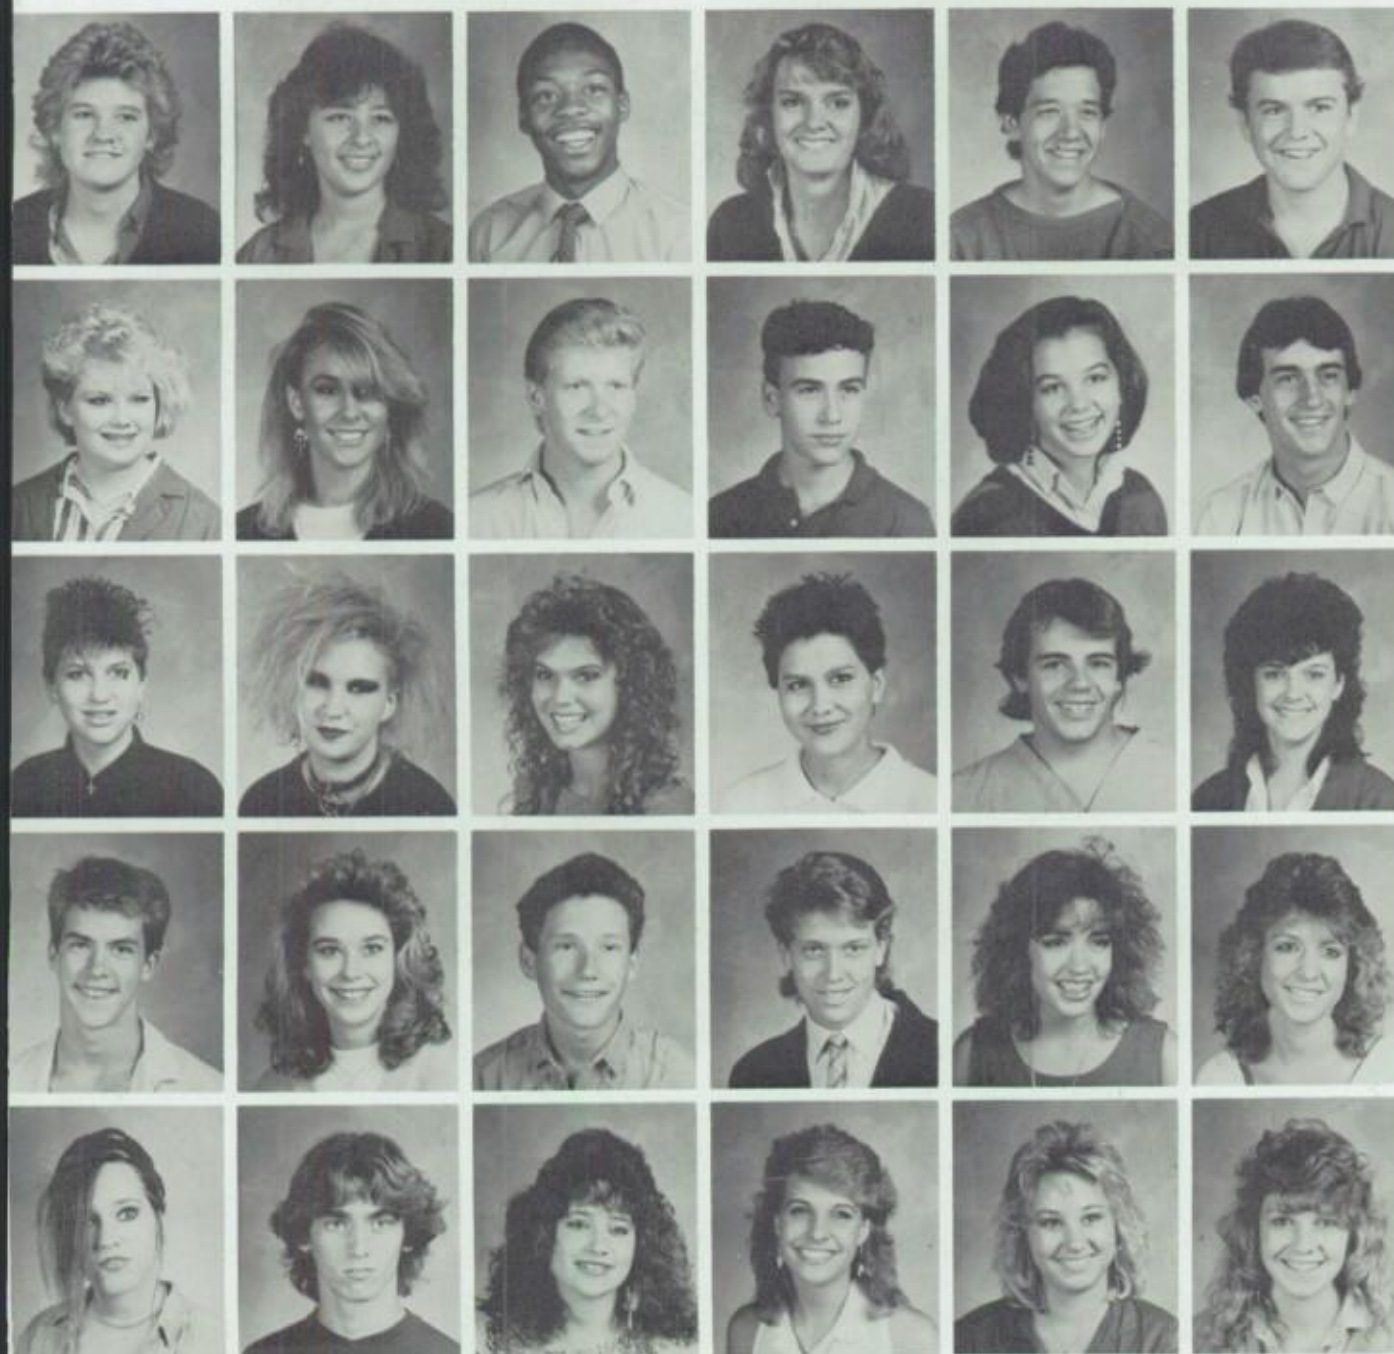

Unfortunately, having a license meant different things to different people. While students saw it as a license to freedom, parents emphasized the new responsibilities that came with having a license. Of course, they also recognized the new opportunity to relieve some of their daily errands into the hands of their children. For the most part, students lived up to their parents' expectations, and the license lived up to the students' expectations.

Strewn across the table is a collection of driver's licenses and keys of those who have passed the tests.

Waiting to get out of the school parking lot, junior Jennifer Hightower flashes a smile from her red Mustang.

Any Prejudices? Anytown!

Anyplace? Anytime? Anywhere? No! It's Anytown! Each summer students from all over the state gathered to absolve prejudices and learned to respect all people. Anytown participants came from a wide variety of backgrounds. Students were chosen based on their leadership and community activities. As Stevie Fresquez stated, "How else are we to be better leaders if we can't talk to all sorts of people?" Encouraged to mingle and get to know as many people as possible, the approximately 80 people at each camp soon were able to trust and confide in one another. Not only did participants learn more about others, they also learned a lot about themselves.

Rob Sherr; Moving to the Top

Rob Sherr was a student at Dobson whose talent and sense of direction placed him far above the others. Rob was active in theater and screen, including an appearance in the movies, "Just One of the Guys" and "National Anthem," numerous plays and speech tournaments at Dobson. In addition he secured a role in a CBS miniseries to be aired this fall.

When asked what kept him interested in performing, Rob replied, "I achieve a certain high from breathing life into a character because I don't do a character, I become the character. In acting no one is perfect. There is always room for me to grow."

Profiling, Rob Sherr exhibits his self-confidence and his winning smile, two reasons for his budding success.

Ballroom Glamour

Stepping from a sleek limousine into the night air, charged with excitement, a dashing couple made their way down a red carpet to a music-filled ballroom.

Was this a scene from Dallas? Dynasty? Falcon Crest? No, it was the one night of the year that students could dine in elegance, dress in glamorous attire, and dance the night away.

Prom preparations began early in the year for the gala affair held in the Hyatt Regency on May 24, 1986. Junior President Gregory James, Vice-President Alexander Matthews, and Secretary-Treasurer Tracey Bridge worked diligently to come up with the theme "Everything in my Heart" by Corey Hart.

Their planning did not stop there. A decision had to be made on a place to dance afterwards. Two hotspots, Devilhouse and Goldrush, were both considered, but the final decision was up to Mr. Walsh.

Highlights of the prom were mementoes such as wine glasses etched with the theme and date, ordered at the time of ticket purchasing, and key chains embossed with the same.

A stitch in time saves nine, but Junior Kari Culotta is saving a lot more by sewing her own prom dress.

Juniors Learn Their AP, CP, PSAT'S

"I'm never going to finish my homework!" could have easily been the frustrated cry of many juniors. All of a sudden there seemed to be an endless number of assignments that made the sophomore year seem so much simpler.

Nervous juniors spent a Saturday morning in the fall taking the PSAT. Studying for this test was one of the largest assignments they had to face, since it was the first step in being accepted to a college.

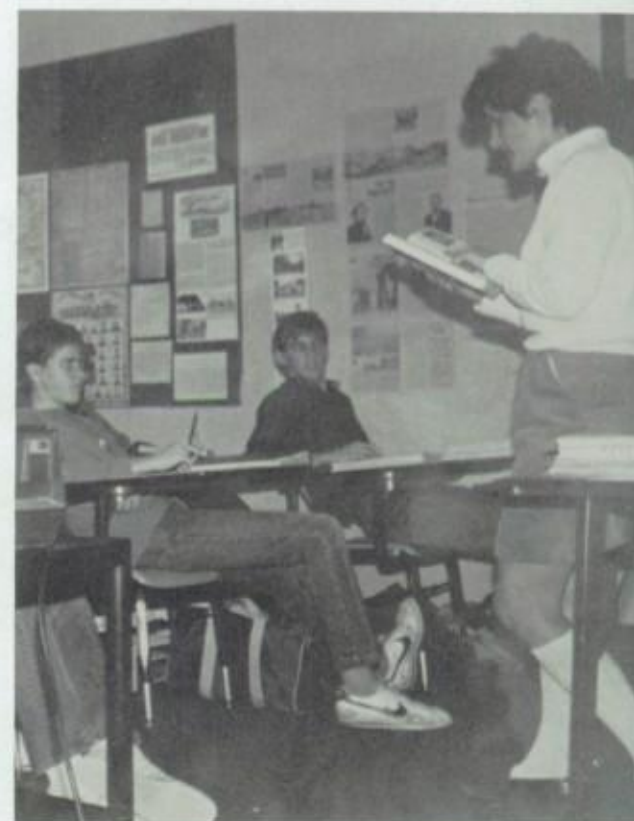

College-prep classes were available for students who were planning to attend college. These challenging classes required students to work harder.

Junior year was the first year in which students had the chance to enroll in advanced placement classes. In these classes, students faced challenging work, and the opportunity to take a test which could earn them college credits.

Despite the extra homework, the classes and the PSAT prepared students for the challenges of college.

Listening intently, students consider what Mrs. Hutchinson says during an A.P. American history class.

Hours of studying numerous booklets helped students prepare for college entrance tests.

"The middle child" has always been said to be the neglected one who is constantly overlooked. Being the middle child of high school classes, the juniors were stuck in between "wise sophomores and the "head honcho" seniors; however, they were far from going unnoticed in the crowd. This was the year that most students headed out to look for jobs, took on new responsibilities and earned a little extra spending money which seemed to last about three days. Making all this travel possible was the fact that they finally obtained their long-awaited driver's licenses, giving them the feeling of freedom and independence.

The junior year was also important because it was time for juniors to start preparing for the college of their choice. Career units helped them decide which career best suited their interests and abilities. Trying this new angle, juniors found the year to be fun-filled.

Hard Work Pays Off For Early Grads

While most juniors were agonizing over which classes to take next year, several were weighing post-graduation options. Yes, graduation. These juniors fulfilled their high school requirements by taking extra classes either before or after school or in summer school. The culmination of all the hard work was graduation — thus giving these juniors an early jump in their life's pursuits after high school.

Graduating juniors: Kim Dillard, Susan Chubrich, and Keith Trimels.

1985-86 Equus Junior Survey

Who was "the typical junior"? Chances were he listened to pop music, but not to Dr. Ruth, owned a car and maybe a Swatch, wanted money and planned to get married by 25.

In December, selected juniors completed the first annual Equus Survey, answering various questions about life as a junior.

An overwhelming 84% of the 400 people polled listened to pop music. 16% enjoyed heavy metal.

Most juniors planned to marry quickly; 50% of them by 25. 47% put it off until 30.

The class seemed to suffer from greed with 65% saying they would rather have money than anything else. 20% preferred good health.

Being a well-educated group, 95% of those polled said they didn't listen to radio sex therapist Dr. Ruth Westheimer. "I don't need her!" was the common response.

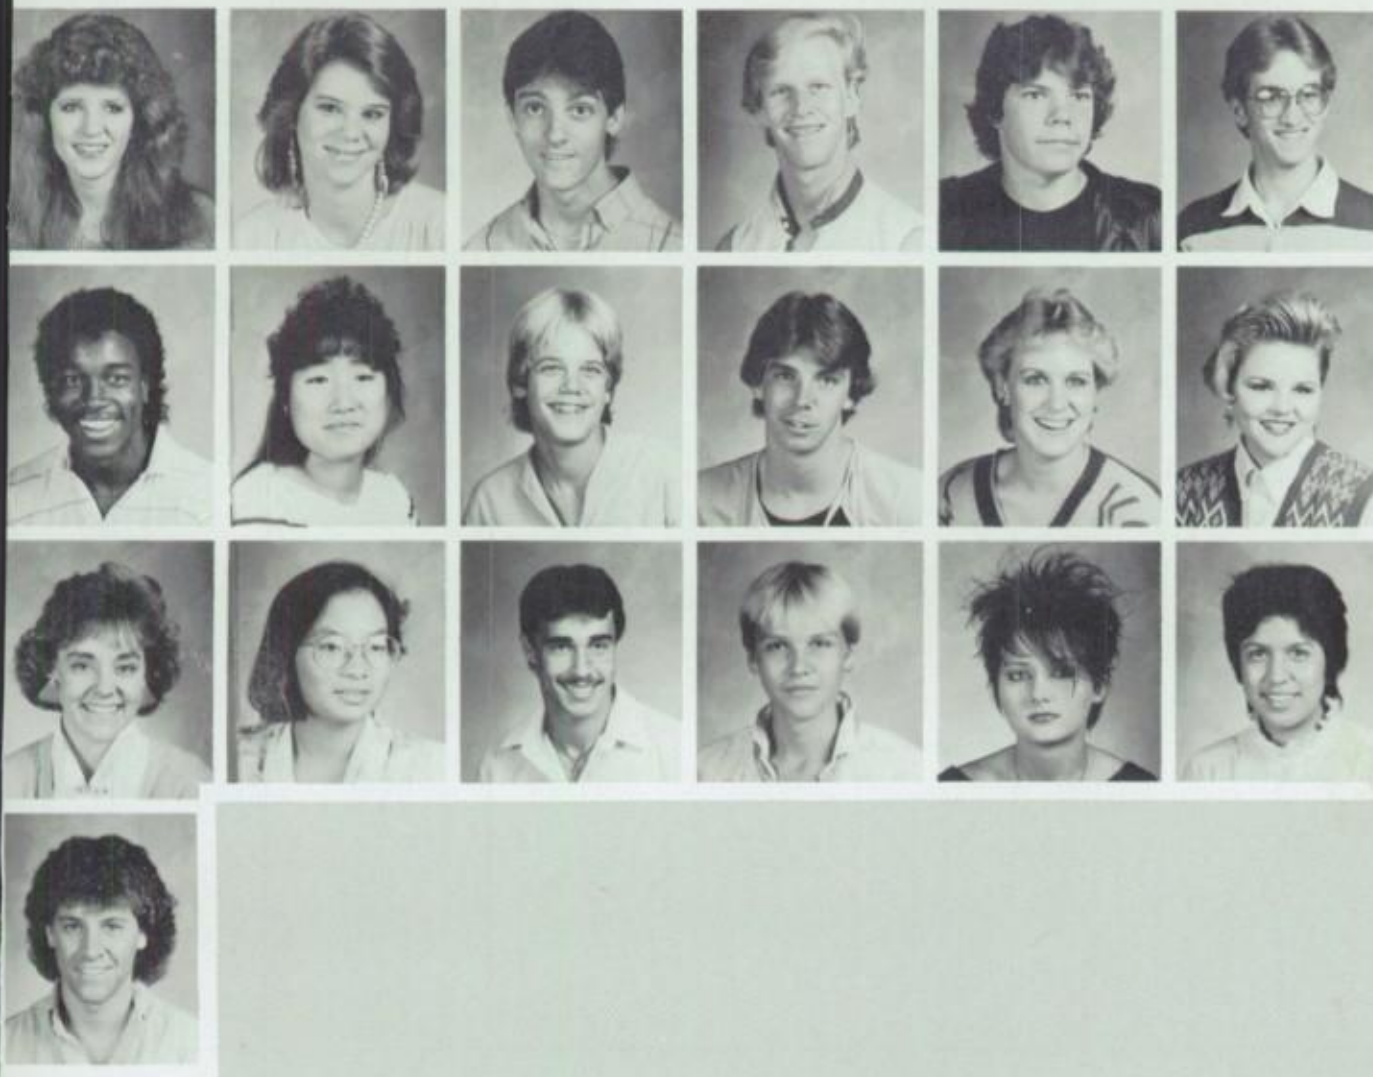

In addition:

- 94% read the school newspaper.
- 96% owned a car.
- 29% owned a Swatch.
- 22% were born in Arizona.
- 95% disliked Fernando "You look maahvelous" Lamas.

Proud to be a junior, Cindy Sevison represents one of the many "typical juniors" on campus.

A third of the juniors had trendy wrists bearing trendy Swatches.

A Spirited Step Up for Sophomores

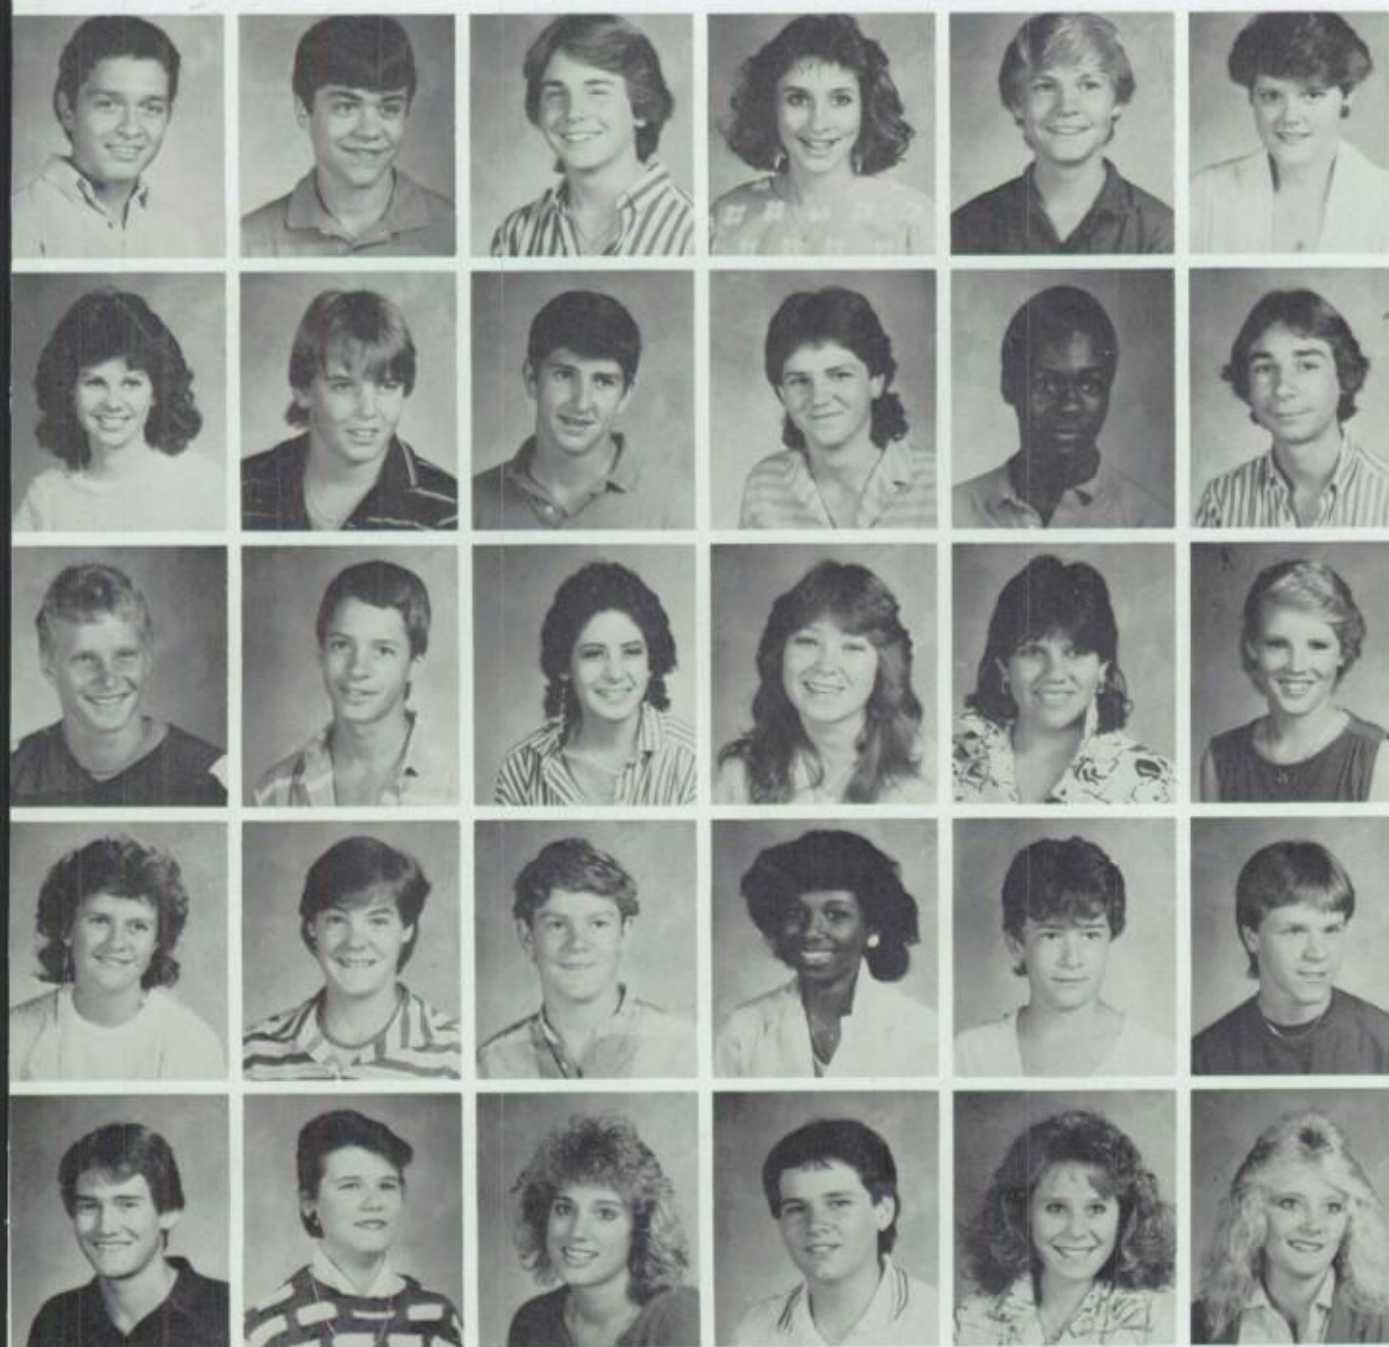

It was common at any football game to hear the spirited sophomores yelling "Juniors, seniors step aside because the sophomore class is walking by!"

It seemed as though the "Sophies" were getting the seniors and juniors back by winning many of the lunchtime spirit activities and dress-up days. A big part of the sophomores' enthusiastic attitudes came from their three sophomore class officers. President Joel Namie stated, "Once we got our class involved, we'd won the battle; the spirit we needed to be an awesome class shone through." The officers worked very hard to get their class involved by organizing the Sophomore Class Committee.

Although the sophomores were still getting stepped on for being the youngest class, those mighty little Mustangs kept up their spirit and class unity and showed everyone that they wouldn't be pushed around.

Permitted On the Road

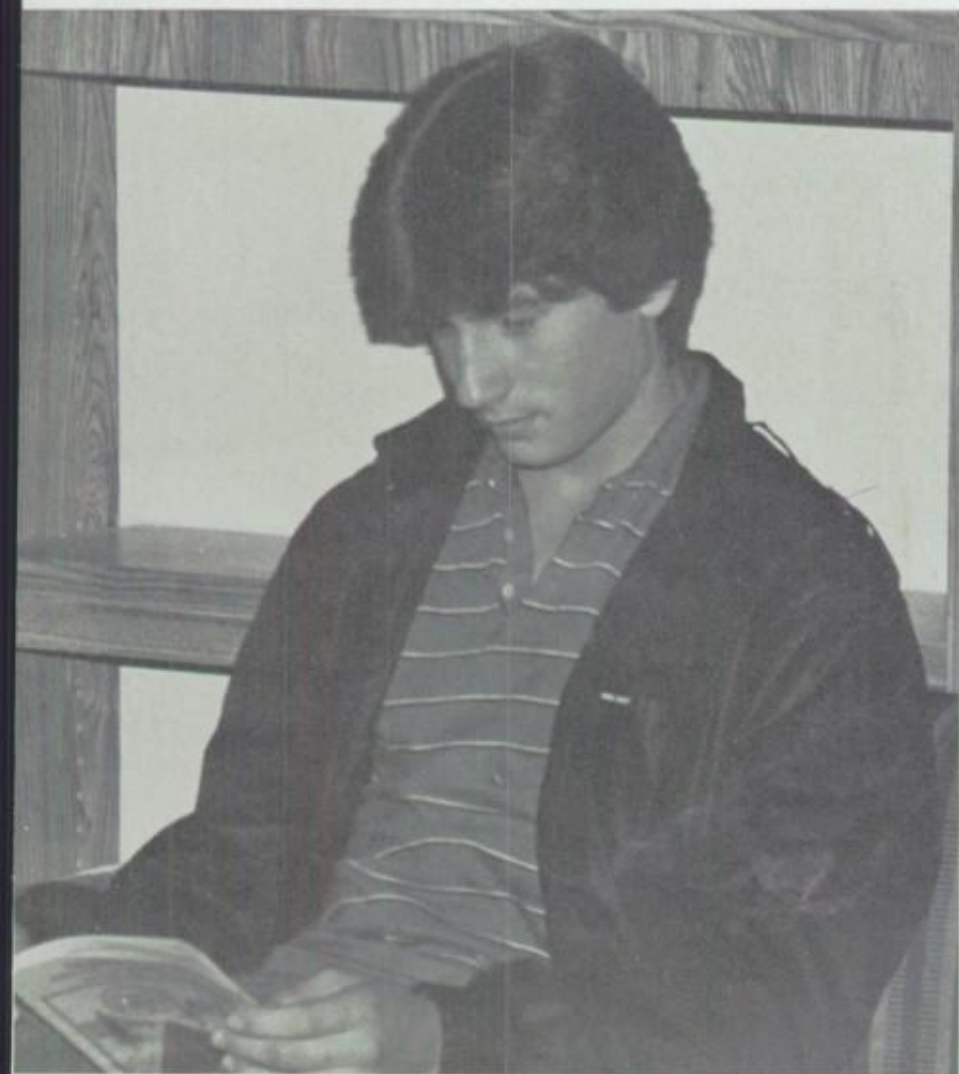

Eagerly anticipating their driving permits, sophomores waited in lengthy lines at the nearest Department of Motor Vehicles to take the qualifying test.

The test consisted of twenty-five multiple choice questions that were geared toward knowledge of significant driving rules and regulations, common road signs, and universal traffic safety laws. When asked about the difficulty of the test, sophomores replied that it was mostly common sense.

Once students successfully passed the exam, they were able to gain behind the wheel driving experience needed to pass the license exam.

For sophomores, this was the first step on the road to independence.

Nervous about the test, sophomore Matt Brabb finds a quiet spot in the library to study the driver's manual.

Giving Tradition A New Style

Visits from Jostens sent students crowding around order tables to purchase class rings, a special event for sophomores. However, before this was possible, the Sophomore Ring Committee spent many lunch hours designing a unique ring style only available to members of the Class of '88. The efforts of this committee were evidently appreciated as students proudly flashed their class rings.

Nicol Jeffords and Angie White admire their newly acquired class rings.

Another Year At the Bottom

Sophomores were plagued two years in a row by slaphappy questions and snide remarks. This all only added to the nightmare the Class of '88 had to live with. They had to face the fact that they would spend another year as the "Mustang Babies." All this agony was due to the construction of Hendrix Junior High, built to relieve the numbers at Dobson. Although the hallways were less congested, the sophomores paid the price by once again being faced with being at the bottom.

Sophomores Gia Pritchard, Joel Namie, and Renee Dubois feel the pressure of being "at the bottom," while seniors Pete Bioletto, Kathy Smith, Lynne Dossey, and juniors Diane Rubio and Greg James have fun displaying the power of being upperclassmen.

Commonly referred to as "squashmores", the spirited Class of '88 struggled to break from the stereotype of immaturity and just plain sophomoric.

They saw themselves in a better light. "I think we're futuristic, future seniors," Jeremy Masters said. Leonard Reid commented, "We have a better outlook on life, we're level-headed."

Sophomores had less to worry about with easy classes, like drivers ed. and not being old enough to work. Shawn Walstad summed it up as, "It's really fun; I have two more years to develop friendships. Of course, I'd rather drive than ride my bike, but tough cookies."

While waiting for Jeanine Williams, Amy Stoll proudly flashes her Class of '88 keychain.

A Leader of The Future?

At age 15, Melenda Mossman went to Arizona State University. Not for college, but instead, Melenda attended the Hugh O'Brian Leadership Conference, a nationwide scholarship foundation. Melenda won by writing an essay expressing her views on leadership and convincing Ms. Carol Best and Mr. Bob Merlene, judges for the award, of her leadership qualities. By attending a convention at ASU, she competed for the opportunity to attend a national conference. Melenda was able to better her leadership qualities due to the award. Excited about the honor, Melenda stated, "I feel extremely lucky to have been chosen to represent Dobson."

1985-86 Equus Sophomore Survey

According to our Yearbook poll, the 1985-86 Sophomore class was consistent in its likes and dislikes. Here were the results.

Who is your favorite group? Pop music — 55%, Heavy Metal — 42%, R and B — 3%.

Who is your favorite morning DJ? Bruce Kelley — 48%, Dave Pratt — 46%, Other 4%.

Do you plan to marry? When? By 20 — 10%, by 25 — 70%, by 30 — 8%, by 40 — 2%, Never — 6%.

What is your favorite Friday night activity? Cruising — 14%, Movies — 10%, Party — 60%, Night Club — 2%, Other — 14%.

A group of sophomores gather around the locker area excited about the weekend. Their favorite activity was partying.

Tenth graders Amy Stoll, Andre Brice, and Jeanine Williams serve as examples of "the typical sophomore."

The 1986 Dobson High Equus was printed by Herff Jones Yearbooks in Marceline, Missouri. 2,500 books were printed on 80 lb. Bordeaux paper.

The creative art cover, designed by editor Hilary Stephens was printed on white litho with custom applied maroon (194) and black (600) colors on a brush grain background. Gold foil formed the book title and name stamp.

Brush script was used for special effect on the cover, title page opening, divider pages and closing. The theme idea was developed by editor Hilary Stephens.

Most copy was set in News

Gothic type — 12 pt. (body), 10 pt. (captions), 30 pt. (subheads), and 48 pt. (headline).

Original graphic designs on the cover, opening and divider pages were created by editor Hilary Stephens with the use of screens and rule lines supplied by the printer. Special effects in the academic section were achieved with the use of Format screens submitted as art work.

Added features included a four page pop-up in the senior section, a tip-in divider page in full color and a die-cut sheet.

The Equus Staff was assisted by R.J. David Photography, Updike

Studios, Gaines Duvall Studios, the bookstore staff, Herff Jones Representative Mary Sonius, Principal Paul Walsh, Assistant Principal John Storment and Audio Visual Specialist Fred Browning.

Spring sports and activities will be covered in the 1986-87 edition of Equus.

The staff of '84-'85 is to be congratulated for producing a first place award winning book as judged by NSPA/ACP. The 1984-85 Equus was also distributed nationally by Herff Jones as a National sample yearbook.

Tired of Trying New Angles

Usually, Yearbook staffers relied on their English skills. This year, though a few geometry lessons came in handy, as they experimented with all types of triangles.

Being top-notch staffers they were obliged to stick with the theme, Trying a New Angle, while working on their pages. Of course, all staffers were wary of deadline day, or D-Day.

The photographers, armed with their all-seeing cameras, patrolled the school, searching for spontaneous action and snapping special school events.

Like everything else, there was even a new angle on Yearbook, with a new editor and adviser in place. In addition, 15 senior staffers, many of whom helped create the very first Dobson yearbooks, graduated this year, leaving their legacy to the rest of the staff. Design by Cheryl Evans, Patrick Harvan, and Hilary Stephens.

Looking up from her work, Amy Gerace peruses other yearbooks for ideas to embellish upon.

Staffers Valerie Rubio, Tracy Milbratz and Diana Ragl search tediously for some unknown soul's retakes.

In front of the camera, for a change, photographer Greg Fresquez smiles broadly for another photographer.

Trying to do everything at once, staffer Tracey Metcalfe races to the Dunkin Donuts while reading her book.

Reflections

Football games, parties and homework are the typical associations made with high school. Yet, recognition must also be made of tragedies which strike unexpectedly. A reason for reflection was the loss of three of our students' lives between the spring of 1985 and the winter 1986.

Mike Verbraken, a sophomore, took his own life. He was an athletic person who participated in wrestling and football. "Inside of Mike there was something that reached out and touched those of us that knew him; letting us know that he was truly someone special. Now Mike is gone, but what he has left in our hearts and minds will remain with us always. We remember you, Mike, and we miss you," stated Tony Landato.

Mike Reimer, a senior passed away after a heart operation. "Mike left a part of himself with each person he touched, when he passed away from this earth he took a part of his friends with him. He will truly be remembered in all that we do," reflected Craig Johnson and Frank Piccioli. Mike was an active member of speech and debate and participated in school plays.

Jackie Flores, a sophomore, was fatally injured in an automobile accident. "Jackie's love for animals was easily seen from her involvement in FFA. She was a warm human being who never had a bad word to say about anyone. Her enthusiasm and friendliness are qualities that she will be well remembered for," commented teacher, Jim Ball.

Although the grief of losing three of our fellow students was felt by many, the memories of their presence will remain.

Opening The Doors . . .

Wistfully thinking about the shot not made, Kim Jeffery contemplates a new strategy for her next match.

Sporting his Vuarnets, Don Pohlenz, "type-ifies" a "Big Man On Campus" as he coolly corrects his typing test.

After five years Dobson finally became what it was originally intended to be: a three year school, just like other Mesa high school, like other Mesa high schools. Due to the local population explosion, Dobson was changed to four classes its second year. Through the effort, talents and flexibility of the students and staff, the school matured while handling the extra problems.

A semblance of normalcy settled over the school as we realized we weren't different size-wise from other high schools. Yet, Dobson kept its own identity; the school had a special quality that set it apart from the rest.

Even though we lost the positive athletic and academic contributions of the freshmen, the remaining classes compensated for their absence, achieving new heights on the athletic field and in the classroom.

As another episode of registration rolled around, it became evident that the school's population would continue to skyrocket in the coming years. However, just as they did in 1985, the students and staff would adjust and succeed by trying new angles.

Rob,

Hiya! I hope we get to go out like we did last summer
this summer we really had a lot of fun. Have a great summer.

Love ya,
Christa

Rob,

HEY! I'm glad you were in my PLAYS CLASS, BECAUSE I REALLY DIDN'T KNOW YOU THAT WELL BEFORE. YOU CAN BE A PRETTY COOL DUDE. HAVE A WILD SUMMER. SEE YA SOMETIME IN THE SUMMER MAYBE.

'86 (I HOPE) Pat Marshall

Rokie babe -

I'm really glad
I met you this year! You're a real sweet guy and I surely hope you stay that way! I hope you have a wonderful summer!
Remember that I love
ya!

Love ya
always.

Rob,

Thank you for letting me borrow your clothes!
You have been so nice to me this year. Just don't party too hard this summer, okay?
Have a jammin' ~~manicure~~ summer!

Love,

Rob-

Hola! Well your kinda like my little brother, not that little! you are a cool guy and quite funny at times especially when you and Darren got high.
What shesere! Anyway thank you all you've done for me and puttining you/and my 3. Good luck in what you do. - Keep smiling!!!
Keep Rockin'!

Love-

Bob,
hey, sup?
you have grown up maybe a little. Keep it to you in school
don't know what to write so I don't hate - (your

Rob, well big boy you finished another year! Its been fun having you in plastics. Hope your next two years
at Dobson are good!
Stay cool and have a great summer!

Darren

Rob,
Hi! Well I hope you had a fun year! Have a great summer, but still be a good boy. Have to get to work.

Love,

Rob, Even though you were a pain in the ass in foods last year you turned out to be a pretty good friend.
We really did hate each other didn't we. You've only got 2 more years of school left + maybe you'll graduate. We're gonna have to party this summer.
Eventhough we still have our differences you're still a real good friend to me. Have a totally bitchin summer + have a massive blast at Robson even though I won't be there. * This summer when we're not partying together make sure you party for me + I'll ~~do~~ do the same for you. So have a killer summer, don't get in too much trouble, + stay sweet.

Love ya,

Gina
Cape

P.S. good luck in your future years
+ I hope you make through life doing what you want to do.

Rob,

Maya dude it has been great knowing you & think you a real nice guy.
Dad's has been great! ^{HA!} ^{HA!}
Anyways have a great summer & party down but be careful!
Love
Michele

Rob,

It's been real cool hanging out with you in science trippin
I know we were both anyways.
Keep wheelin' & chasin' (you'll have to sell me some of your best indiccs someday) and keep parkin' all summer. maybe I'll see you some time, but if not, I'll catch you in some class next year.

Howz life, Good!!! I hope you have a killer summer. Practically everyone writing the same thing so I'm going to write something different. Ok. If you ever need a pack of cigs just bring buck and come to me. By the way, do me a favor, give pat a little smack upside the head. Believe me, he needs it. So don't party to hardy and you have to quit ~~runnin~~ so fast can ~~catch~~ catch up to you. You no what I mean.
If you ever need to party, just give me a buzz and I'll throw a party.

Your friend and party Bud

Rob,
I'm glad I got a chance to meet you.
You've made plastics to be an o.k. class.
I don't think I'll ever take another shop class again. I hope I have a class with you next year! Have a fun summer and good luck in your junior year. Will stay sweet and cute. Hope to see you next year.
